Quick Work in Picking Jury at Carman Trial

Mrs. Florence Carman.

Dr. Edwin Carman.

3,000 Storm Court Room as Detor's Wife Begins Fight for Her Life.

By ROBERT C. CRANSTON,
Staff Correspondent of the American.

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Pale but calm, Mrs. Florence C. Carman came into court today to stand trial for the murder of Mrs. Louise D. Bailey, who was shot to death in the office of Mrs. Carman's husband, Dr. Edwin Carman, on the evening of June 20 last.

One hundred and fifty solemn-faced talesmen, from whom the twelve jurors are to be selected, filed into the courtroom and presented themselves to Justice Charles H. Kelby. It is hoped by District Attorney Lewis J. Smith and by counsel for the defense that the work of selecting a jury will not take more than two days.

A big crowd, estimated at 3,000, struggled for entrance into the little courtroom, but Justice Kelby had previously given notice that the trial chamber should not be overcrowded. Consequently many men and women were turned away, keenly disappointed at their failure to secure an entrance. A whole army of men and women newspaper writers, chiefly from New York City, had descended upon Mineola over the week-end and were on hand with a battery of camera men.

District Attorney Smith expressed

Monsignor Benson of England Dead

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Monsignor Robert Hugh Benson, former private chamberlain to Pope Pius X. and one of the ablest writers of the Roman Catholic church, died today at Salford, aged forty-three. He was a son of the late Archbishop Benson.

Very Rev. Monsignor Benson was a son of Right Rev. Dr. Benson, late Archbishop of Canterbury. He was born at Wellington College, November 18, 1871. He was educated at Eton and at Cambridge University. He took holy orders in the Episcopal church and officiated as minister for some years.

In 1903 he was received into the Catholic church. A year later he was ordained priest in Rome. In 1911 he was made a private chamberlain to Pope Pius X., with the title of Monsignor.

Father Benson has lectured much in America and on several occasions has been heard in Boston, in the pulpit of the cathedral, at the church of the Immaculate Conception and before the Catholic Women's League.

Monsignor Benson, [illegible] brothers, was a prolific writer. His best-known books are: "The Light Invisible," "By What Authority?" "The Religion of the Plain Man," "Lord of the World," "The Dawn of All," and many other volumes, besides various magazine articles and pamphlets.

Shipload of Dyes from Germany to Break U. S. Famine

BERLIN, Oct. 19. (via Amsterdam)—The dye famine in America is soon to be broken. It is stated here that a full ship's cargo of dye materials has been sent to Rotterdam to be transported to the United States. It is said to have been gathered by United States consular representatives on orders from the American State Department.

THAW CASE SET FOR DEC. 7 IN SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Monday, December 7, was set by the Supreme Court of the United States for hearing arguments on the Harry K. Thaw extradition case.

FIGHT TO SAVE MAN IN WELL

WARE, Oct. 19.—Fifty men dug through the side of a hill here today in the hope of saving the life of Maurice Allen, who is trapped in quicksand at the bottom of a well twenty-eight feet deep. Allen has been imprisoned in the sands for more than fifteen hours.

A life saving device attached to a barrel was lowered into the well today. The barrel covers Allen's head and air was pumped to him through a long tube. Efforts to reach Allen from the top of the pit failed. Cave-in after cave-in threatened to trap the rescuers as well. The barrel was used to prevent caving from smothering the man.

After twelve hours of useless effort the rescue party commenced to cut their way through the side of the hill. It is about twenty feet from the side of the hill to the place

BROWN IN CARE OF NURSE

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Commissioner George H. Brown of Lowell, Mass., who fled from that city following an attack upon him with scissors by Mrs. Annie Mullaney, was located today by the AMERICAN at the Hotel Belmont, where he is under the care of a nurse. Brown is in seclusion, while his wounded face is healing. He refuses to see any one.

LOWELL, Oct. 19.—"Commissioner Brown can start any proceedings he wants to. A mother has a right to defend her daughter, and I gave him a week's warning," declared Mrs. Annie Mullaney, today. City Hall charwoman, in giving her version of her attack on Finance Commissioner George H. Brown.

Brown, who was elected Mayor of Lowell while a patrolman, is suffering from wounds on the face, declared to have been inflicted by shears, wielded by Mrs. Mullaney in defence of her daughter, Vera, twenty-four, who is employed in the Street Department office. The affair has caused a sensation, particularly among politicians.

Mrs. Mullaney, who lives at No. 22 Ash street, has been a charwoman at the City Hall for fourteen years. Her daughter Vera is reported engaged to wed John C. Farrington, for two years chairman of the School Committee.

MOTHER GIVES STORY.

"Wednesday afternoon Brown was in the office of the Street Department, where my daughter Vera is a clerk," Mrs. Mullaney said today.

"My daughter told him to get out of the office. He did not do so and she threw an ink well at him. She told me what had happened and I told him that night that I would fix him so that he would have to go to a hospital. I told him that I had listened to enough talk at City Hall and elsewhere about my daughter and him.

"Thursday morning I went to the Street Department and asked for Brown, though that was not his office. He was in the office with Commissioner Morse. The door was closed.

"I rapped and went in. 'I have come for a reckoning,' I told Brown. 'You have no right to annoy my daughter.'

"He said something, but I don't know what it was. I had already told him that I would send him to a hospital.

"I hit him with the butt end of the shears." (City Hall attaches say the injuries must have been inflicted by the points. Brown bled profusely from the cuts, and said he had cut himself in shaving).

"I hit him once, and then he twisted the shears out of my hands and ran out of the room. I picked up a half brick and through it at him, but it did not hit him.

WARNED ON PHONE.

"Mr. Brown has been a nuisance in the street commissioner's office ever since he put Mr. Putnam out two months ago. Vera told me he used to come in there at 9 o'clock in the morning and stay during office hours for the entire day.

"He used to bang around and say disagreeable things to her. Her attitude toward him was always merely one of courtesy due from a subordinate."

Pope Refused Pleas of Rulers to Pray for Their Troops

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—Jean de Bonnefon, a leading French Catholic, reveals today that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austro-Hungary, in an autograph letter, implored Pope Benedict XV. to bless the Austro-Hungarian army. The Pope refused, reminding the Austrian Emperor that he was also the spiritual protector of the Servian Catholics. The Kings of Bavaria and Saxony also asked the Pope to bless their Catholic troops, but the requests were ignored. M. Bonnefon makes public the new encyclical on war which Pope Benedict XV. completed on October 3rd. In it the Pontiff asks:

"What would be the position of the papacy, materially deprived of liberty and enclosed in a narrow circle of a state, if that state separated it from all communication with civilization or even exposed the person of the Pope and the sacred college to a bombardment of Rome, which is always possible in an European war? We don't demand temporal power, but facilities for the exercise of spiritual power."

Seek Missing Wife of Montana Hermit

The AMERICAN has received a most remarkable letter, asking help in locating a Mrs. Christina Brown, the wife of George A. Brown. The letter is from James F. Grafton of Choteau, Montana. He says Brown, in a state of nervous breakdown, is living the life of a hermit in Flathead Forest Reserve in Montana. Grafton has tried to engage Brown as a ranch hand, and Brown refuses to go to work, but talks continually of his longing to see his children. Grafton asks that any one having information as to Mrs. Brown's whereabouts write to "James F. Grafton, No. 389 First avenue, South Great Falls, Montana." He will then arrange for Mrs. Brown and her children to go West, will help find Brown in the forest and will give him work.

George Gould Not Brother's Keeper

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—George J. Gould has filed in Supreme Court a notice that he does not consider himself the keeper of his brother, Howard, and does not wish to be examined as to the latter's income and property affairs. He asks the court to vacate an order for his examination in his action against Howard Gould to foreclose a $54,000 lien against $500,000 worth of Howard Gould's real property on Fifth avenue.

ITALIAN FLEET MOBILIZED, TO BE REVIEWED BY KING

Naval operations of importance divide interest with the progress of the Franco-Belgian battle in the news of the great war today.

Tokio officially announces the destruction on October 17 of the Japanese cruiser Takachiho by a mine in the Kiao-Chau bay.

This is the most important naval loss sustained by the Japanese since they began war against Germany in the Far East. Only one officer and nine men out of a total complement of 357 are known to have been saved. The cruiser was steaming through the bay to take up a better position for the bombardment of the German forts. The Takachiho was 300 feet long and 46 feet in the beam. Her displacement was 3,700 tons and her speed 18 knots. Her main battery consisted of eight six-inch guns.

It is officially announced by the Montenegrin War Office that the French cruiser Waldeck Rousseau has sunk an Austrian submarine off the Dalmatian coast and is now bombarding Cattaro.

Rome dispatches say that King Victor Emmanuel is shortly to review at Taranto the Italian fleet, which has been secretly mobilized. Six naval divisions have been formed. Each consists of dreadnoughts or other battleships, first and second class cruisers, training ships, old type war vessels, besides torpedo boats, submarines and scoutships. A torpedo boat destroyer flotilla is attached to each division. The Italian government has a new style gun, which can carry eleven miles and which has been mounted upon some of the newer warships.

A London news agency reports that a British cruiser and two destroyers have captured a German mine layer disguised as a hospital ship.

Preferring wreck and death to capture by the British, the commanders of the German torpedo destroyers S-115, S-117, S-118 and S-119 drove their vessels upon the coast of the North Sea on Saturday when cornered by the English cruiser Undaunted, according to a statement issued by the German Admiralty today. The four destroyers were completely wrecked. The crews of the vessels numbered 224, and nearly all of them are believed to have been lost.

BELGIANS REPULSE GERMANS

Efforts by the German army in Belgium to strike the French coast have thus far been repelled, and the allies, with whom the Belgian troops are now fighting, have gained ground, according to an official statement issued at Paris this afternoon. The Germans have brought their artillery into action in their attempt to bring to success their great flanking movement.

The Paris report seems to discredit a previous dispatch, sent out from Rotterdam, which said:

"A message just received from a German source reports that the Germans have crossed the Belgian border onto the coast of France and are now about eight miles from Dunkirk. Fort Des Dunes, first of Dunkirk's outer forts, is in their path."

News of the arrival of Admiral von Tirpitz, head of the German navy, at Antwerp, is taken in London as confirmation of the theory that Germany intends to make an attack on England as soon as practicable. There are rumors that German submarines have been transported by rail to Belgium and that these will be put into the waters of the channel as soon as the Germans are in undisputed possession of the coast. A news agency dispatch from Berlin says:

"The shortening days and the thickening weather in the North Sea are steadily improving conditions for the operation of submarines and torpedo boats. Marine experts expect that henceforth there will be intense activity throughout the entire North Sea."

39TH DAY OF GREAT BATTLE.

This, the thirty-ninth day of fighting in the mighty conflict in France and Belgium, finds these to be the chief features:

1—In the north, in a square roughly bounded by Dunkirk, Arras, Audenarde and Ostend, gigantic manoeuvres are in progress, accompanied by severe fighting at certain points.

2—The allies claim to have occupied the important railway junction point of Armentieres in the centre of the rough square and to have secured good positions between Calais and the main force of Germans. French forces have crossed the Yser River.

3—An artillery duel is reported to be in progress between French and English guns on one side and German batteries on the other near Lille.

4—It is rumored that heavy firing has been heard off the coast, indicating that British warships are bombarding Germans in the extreme northern part of Belgium. Offsetting this, however, is a report that the Germans have left only a handful of uhlans in the ports that they have occupied.

5—There is hard fighting in progress on the eastern end of the battle line in the vicinity of St. Mihiel, Verdun and St. Die. The French War Office says that a German offensive movement northeast of St. Die has been repulsed.

6—The Germans are reported to have begun the bombardment of Belfort, France, with heavy siege guns and mortars.

In the north, along the Belgian border, the allies claim to be fighting a winning fight notwithstanding the fact that their progress has been slow.

The French army operating in Lorraine is reported to be almost within cannon range of the outer works of Metz.

GERMAN OFFENSIVE IN EAST.

German troops have again taken the offensive on the East Prussian frontier, it was announced at the Berlin War Office at midnight. The fighting about Warsaw and in the western theatre of war continues without decisive results. The German official statement says:

The main German attack in the eastern conflict is being directed against the Russian army south of Warsaw, chiefly in the vicinity of Ivangorod and Josefow, according to Petrograd reports. For five days in succession the Germans and the allies have striven to cross the Vistula between these two towns.

On Sunday two German aeroplanes flew over Warsaw and dropped five bombs. Only two of them exploded, but seven persons were killed and many injured.

An official Austrian statement today estimates the Russian losses at Przemysl at 40,000.

The Archives of the Russian embassy at Constantinople have been sent to Odessa, according to Berlin reports. This indicates that diplomatic relations between Turkey and Russia may soon be broken off.

2,400,000 RUSSIANS NOW IN BATTLE ALONG THE VISTULA

PETROGRAD, Oct. 19.—According to the best estimates obtainable here the Russians now have 2,400,000 troops engaged in the fighting along the Vistula and San. This is exclusive of the forces in the Lomza and Zawalki districts and along the northern frontier of Poland, where the Germans are showing great activity, apparently attempting a flanking movement.

It is believed at the War Office that the attack on Warsaw will not be resumed until the conflict about Ivangorod is decided. The German advance guards at one time arrived within five miles of Warsaw, but were unable to bring up their artillery because of heavy rains. The railway from Lowicz to Warsaw was destroyed by the Russians before the Germans reached that region and it will have to be rebuilt before the Germans can bring up their heavy guns.

In advancing on Warsaw the Germans will have to traverse the district about Lowicz, Sklerniewice and Kutno. This is flat and has been turned into a morass by the recent rains. Only the reconstruction of the railroad or the freezing of the ground will permit the Germans to get through the heavy guns that are essential to the reduction of the Warsaw fortifications.

The correspondent of the Novoe Vremya at military headquarters sends the following dispatch, telling of a trap into which the Austro-German forces were led at Josefow:

"More than 2,000 of the enemy's troops were killed at Josefow by a ruse of the Russian commander. When the Austrian-German troops approached the Vistula with the intention of crossing he feigned a retreat. Before the enemy arrived, however, he had concealed a number of batteries on the east bank of the Vistula.

"Thinking the river unguarded the enemy started to cross the river on rafts in force. When the rafts had nearly reached the eastern bank the hidden Russians opened fire with machine guns and rifles. Unable to retreat, the Austro-German troops propelled their rafts to shore under the deadly hail. As soon as the survivors had landed the Russians charged with the bayonet and completed the debacle."

Official War Reports.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—In the eastern war the Germans are advancing near Lyck, driving back the Russian forces. The battle south of Warsaw continues near that city. In the western arena fighting goes on despite heavy rains. There are indications of snow at several points, but our troops are well equipped for the cold weather that threatens. The conflict is less severe now, however, than it has been for some time.

German Coat of Arms

In general, the situation remains almost unchanged. There has been no decisive result thus far, but conditions remain favorable to our operations.

AUSTRIAN.

VIENNA, Oct. 19.—Our attack in the battle on both flanks of the Strwias River, south of Przemysl, was continued yesterday and our troops succeeded well in close to the enemy. At several points our troops were advanced to within a fortress. Last night several attacks of the Russians were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy. Our heavy artillery is now in action.

Austrian Coat of Arms

The pursuit of the enemy north of Wyszkow, near the Carpathian passes, has continued. In other parts our troops have already advanced over the Carpathians.

The Russian losses during their attacks on Przemysl are estimated at 40,000 dead and wounded.

FRENCH.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—The enemy's artillery has cannonaded without result the front of Nieuport-Vladsloo at the east of Dixmude. The allied forces, and notably the Belgian army, have not only repulsed the new German attacks but have themselves advanced to Houlers (twenty-two miles from the coast).

French Coat of Arms

On our left wing, between the Lys and the Clette of Labassanne, we have advanced in the direction of Lille. Extremely obstinate conflicts are taking place on the front of La Bassee-Abbey-St. Nazaire. We are advancing house by house in these two localities. To the north and to the south of Arras our troops have been fighting without respite for more than ten days with a perseverance and a courage which have not given way at any time.

In the region of Chaulnes we have repulsed a strong counter attack by the enemy and gained some ground.

At the centre there is nothing to report.

On our right wing, in Alsace and to the west of Colmar, our advance guards are on the line of Berthenevelle-Parisberg-Parther to the south we still hold Thann.

MONTENEGRIN.

CETTINJE, Montenegro, Oct. 19.—Two Austrian submarines left the Bocche di Cattaro today and attacked the French fleet, which was proceeding from Antivari to the Dalmatian coast. The French cruiser Waldeck-Rousseau sank one of the submarines and the fleet afterwards bombarded the forts at Cattaro.

An Austrian aeroplane from Castelnuovo dropped several bombs upon French warships convoying transports, but the bombs did no harm.

FEAR SUBMARINE THAT SUNK CRUISER HAWKE HAS BEEN LOST

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Oct. 19.—Fear was expressed here today that the German submarine which sank the British cruiser Hawke has herself been lost. As far as can be learned no report from the submarine has been received at the Admiralty since her exploit. The American correspondent is informed that the conflict along the Vistula is fast assuming the form of a decisive battle, despite the hardships under which the Germans are effecting their advance. Their guns are sinking in the morasses over which it is necessary for them to proceed, and at various points roads have to be hewed through the forests. It is stated, however, that the morale of the troops is excellent, despite the suffering they have undergone.

RIOTS IN LONDON AS MOB OF 5,000 ATTACKS GERMAN STORES

LONDON, Oct. 19.—After fighting for more than three hours a heavy force of police were able early today to subdue a mob of 5,000 and rioters who had attacked a number of German stores in Deptford.

More than a score of prisoners, both women and men, were taken. The prisoners were arraigned before noon and all but one women were remanded in custody for future examination. The rioting in Deptford, in South London, broke out early last night, but was checked. After midnight it was renewed with more violence than ever. Many were hurt in the clashes. The immediate cause of the outbreak was the arrival of 500 Belgians in the neighborhood. Dock workers precipitated the trouble and soon High street, the centre of the zone of disorder, was a mass of struggling men and women. A handful of troops assisted the police. These were the first "War riots" in London.

ENGLAND'S RESERVES HAVE AGE ADVANTAGE, REPINGTON SAYS

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Colonel Repington, the Times war expert, in comparing the second and third line troops of Germany and England, says:

"It is evident that Germany has 2,000,000 in the field. The mass of armies now consists chiefly of second and third grade troops. As we have plenty of such troops we must see whether we should not use them earlier than we had intended. There is a difference between our second class troops and those of Germany. All the German reservists have received more of less military training. The Landwehr may be 38½ years old and reservists of the Landsturm from 41 up. The second raises, the special reserve territorials, will not be all highly trained, but they will have a great pull over Germany from a standpoint of ages.

"We do not always notice any particular principles forwarded by Germany in the use of her second line troops. Her dire need compelled her to throw in troops as they came, regardless of quality.

"General Von Hindenburg, in his fight at Tannenburg, seems to have held his front with Landsturm and used his first line troops on the wing for decisive strokes against the Russians."

As to operations in France Colonel Repington says:

"This extraordinary line of battle which stretches across France is something new in history. No one knows quite what to make or think of it. The advantage may rest with the commander who first dominates a new situation and refuses any longer to be dominated. It is he who can use first and second grade troops to the best advantage who may gain much."

Colonel Repington comments as follows upon the Antwerp relief force of British marines:

"I believe that the operations there were practicable. They did not fail through any fault of ours. It was a natural disappointment."

LINER UNDER U. S. FLAG HELD AT HALIFAX, N. S.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 19.—The Standard Oil tank steamer Iroquois lay at anchor here today with the American flag flying from her mast while Captain Petterson, her commander, awaited the session of the Admiralty Court that was to decide her disposition following her capture by a British cruiser off New York. Three members of the crew were taken ashore early today and lodged in the military prison. They are believed to be Germans. The officers and other members of the crew are all naturalized Americans.

When the war broke out the Iroquois was the Washington, and was under German register. A few weeks ago her register was changed to American. It is expected that the career of this ship will be used by the British government as a test case to establish its position in refusing the transfer of German ships to the American flag.

Captain Petterson refused to navigate the tanker to Halifax because he was refused permission to communicate with his employers in New York. The last part of her journey here was made under tow by the Carsonia because a member of the steamer's crew had tried to scuttle her.

were Allen was held captive. Allen talked with his wife and the men at the top of the well at intervals and early today was cheerful and hopeful.

At noon today the diggers had come within ten feet of the man and hoped to extricate him late today. Allen, because the barrel is over his head, cannot tell night from day and does not know how long he has been in the sand.

Allen is married and has four children. He is a carpenter for the Otis Company. He lives on the top of the hill and was visiting a well. He was at the bottom of the pit digging and his wife was at the top emptying the buckets of dirt as he hoisted them up to her.

About 5 o'clock last night Mrs. Allen was startled by a cry from her husband. She clambered down a ladder and found him trapped in quicksand. She was unable to extricate him. Neighbors rushed to help him and Chief of Police D. W. Buckley was summoned. He called Chief Thomas Gleason of the fire department. Several men of both departments were ordered out. When one man descended a ladder into the well he found Allen up to his neck in quicksand. The men scraped away the sand with his hands, passed it to another man above him on the ladder, who in turn passed it to another man above to the top. This was continued until enough sand had been cleared away from Allen to enable the rescuers to use shovels with safety.

Colorado Strike Settlement Fails

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—President Wilson today announced that the coal operators have rejected the plan of settlement of the Colorado mining strike. He told callers the operators insisted upon such modifications as to eliminate its vital features and that the question of settlement still was more or less undetermined.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach or bowels.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

BOY PREACHER TELLS JOKES OF ROCKEFELLER

Here's the latest Rockefeller story. John D. told the story to Charles Forbes Taylor, the fifteen-year-old "boy preacher," who is now conducting revival services at the North Avenue Baptist Church in Cambridge. Recently young Taylor had luncheon with Rockefeller and Rev. Dr. William W. Bustard at the Rockefeller mansion at Tarrytown, N. Y. Today young Taylor repeated the story as it was told him by the world's richest man:

"A chap who had had a drop too much was wending his way homeward along about 1 a. m. He came across a horse trough and bethinks him of putting his feverish head in the water. He did, and immediately began a great bit of spluttering and splashing.

"Another early bird, who happened to be sober, ran up and asked:

"'Hey, there, what are you up to?'

"At this point in the story Mr. Rockefeller pushed his chair back from the table, leaned forward, put his arms out straight and made the trite motions of swimming. Then he finished by quoting the intoxicated person as saying:

"'Save the women and children first; I can thicy swim.'"

ANOTHER JOHN D. STORY.

Here's another Rockefeller story young Taylor tells:

Dr. Bustard was with Rockefeller on the golf links at Tarrytown. The clergyman said to John D.:

"I think, Mr. Rockefeller, that your success has been in placing men in the right places."

Rockefeller: "No, I don't think it is that so much, Dr. Bustard, as it has been placing GOOD men in the right places."

And here's a third.

Dr. Bustard was wearing a battered old hat on the links. A major in the army had bantered the clergyman considerably, saying:

"Dr. Bustard, where in the world did you get that hat? Dates from the Civil War, eh?"

Dr. Bustard: "I can't understand why you gentlemen are picking on me like this. I'm only a poor minister. I can't afford good hats like you rich men wear. It's a shame to pick on me so."

BUSTARD SCORES ONE.

Rockefeller: "It doesn't matter that you are poor, so long as you are honest, Dr. Bustard."

Dr. Bustard (quick as a flash and with a smile): "That's why I am poor, Mr. Rockefeller."

Young Taylor, who was born in England, is termed the "Boy Moody and Sankey" because he is able to preach and also sing. He sang the song "Moody" for Rockefeller and the pathos of the words resulted in clinging tears into the millionaire's eyes.

"Mr. Rockefeller is a perfect gentleman and awfully jolly and healthy and he cracked some awful good jokes," said the "Boy preached. "And I told them well. He could have made as good an actor as he has been a financier.

"He is very clever, one of the cleverest men I ever met. And he seemed as happy as the day. He was all there is to know about many things. He knows flowers and birds and trees intimately.

"The most striking thing about the conversation was that he found out most everything I knew. He asked me who was the "war lord" of England.

"I can't remember,' I told him.

ASKS MANY QUESTIONS.

"Now, let me see,' he said in his peculiar slow but effective manner. 'Now isn't it Sir Edward Grey?'

"I was bent on not committing myself on anything about the war, so I replied:

"'I don't just remember now, Mr.

Charles Forbes Taylor, the fifteen-year-old English "Boy Preacher" who is conducting revival meetings in Cambridge and who declares John D. Rockefeller would make a fine actor.

Young Taylor, who has preached at Rockefeller's Euclid avenue church in Cleveland, O., is having great success in his meetings. He is quite an athlete and has never worn a hat. He tells a story of a woman who him on the street the other day with his strikingly bushy hair and exclaimed:

"Huh, I bet it isn't REAL hair."

He also tells of a newsboy who gave him the "once over" and fairly whistled:

"Gee whiz, what do you know about that?"

King's Doctor and His Wife Cremated

Dr. Morris Longstreth, former physician to King Alfonso of Spain, and his wife, Mrs. Maray O. H. Longstreth, were buried today from their late home at No. 101 Brattle street, Cambridge. The services were conducted by the Rev. Paual Revere Frothingham of the Arlington Street Church. Music was by a quartet from the same church. The bodies were cremated at Mount Auburn. Dr. Longstreth died at Barcelona, Spain, on August 15. His wife died in the same city nine days later. The bodies were shipped to America together.

TWOHIG HIRES HALL TO DECRY GIRL'S ARREST

Despite alleged police interference, former Representative James J. Twohig of Ward 15 has succeeded in hiring a hall in South Boston for a mass meeting or outrage next Tuesday evening, to protest the recent arrest of Katherine Driscoll of Tudor street. This seventeen-year-old lame girl was placed in a cell and fined for loitering.

Dahlgren Hall was the one secured after Mr. Twohig had been refused the use of other halls. Protests against similar events will be made.

STIRS SOUTH BOSTON.

The former Representative today also circulated a petition for the transfer of Captain Hugh Lee from the Broadway police station.

The prosecution of little Katie Driscoll has stirred South Boston. Neighbors are incensed at what they term an "outrage." The girl has been housekeeper for a large family since her mother died. She had just finished the supper dishes and was talking on the street corner with two boys, when Patrolman Joseph Elredge arrested the three of them. He said Captain Lee had given him orders to break up objectionable gangs of boys and girls in that vicinity.

Former Representative Twohig has taken up the fight for Katie Driscoll and her family. He said today:

"I have started a petition seeking the transfer of Captain Lee because many citizens feel as I do, that he is not fit to preside over that police district. Conditions are intolerable. We find ambitious officers rounding up defenceless and innocent children, while forty-five or more illicit liquor places are doing a thriving business.

"Anybody who may suspect even in the faintest manner that Katherine Driscoll deserved to be arrested or reprimanded is mistaken. She is a refined and level-headed little girl. She has too much to do at home to be wayward, and the fact that one of her brothers was always in the group near their door shows that things could not be out of the way as certain police officials would like to have people believe.

CHILDREN IN COURT.

"Children are hailed into the South Boston Court for the most trivial reasons and their records enriched. In fact there are as many unwarranted arrests from the Broadway division that citizens are becoming suspicious.

"Where are the boys and girls going to go, if they cannot stand on the sidewalk in side streets where their presence after all does not impede traffic?

"These so-called corner raids must be stopped. The police ought to be taught the limitations of their powers. Law and order should be respected, but not abused.

"Suppose Katherine Driscoll was your sister. The trouble is with the head of the police precinct. Captain Lee ought to be transferred. His regime is wrong. He has no sympathy for the people. He doesn't study conditions."

ELEANOR GATES, THE PLAYWRIGHT, WEDS FREDERICK MOORE

Author of "Poor Little Rich Girl" Bride of Newspaper Man in Paterson, N. J.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Miss Eleanor Gates, the well-known writer and playwright, author of the plays, "We Are Seven" and "The Poor Little Rich Girl," was married to Frederick Moore, newspaper man and soldier, in the home of Dr. and Mrs. William Spickers, No. 421 Broadway, Paterson, N. J.

Only a few of their closest friends were invited. Pastor Walter Koenig officiated.

Mrs. William Spickers, who was before her marriage Miss Reed Hutchins, the California beauty and society girl, and the bride's most intimate friend, was matron of honor. Dr. Spickers was best man, and Master John Powers Spickers, the page, aged four, in white, carried a basket of pink roses.

The room was a bower of yellow and golden-brown chrysanthemums, and the ceremony itself took place under a bower of Autumn leaves and chrysanthemums. Miss Sophia Reed Hutchins sang "Depuis le Jour" (Charpentier) immediately preceding the ceremony.

WARNING OF GARDNER IS APPLAUDED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. — "We haven't enough of anything."

This is the keynote of opinions of navy and war chiefs who commented today on the unpreparedness of the United States in event of war, as exploited by Representative Gardner in his "wake-up-America" warning.

The hope is expressed now by officials that the Secretary of the Navy and Secretary of War will make drastic recommendations to Congress as to increase of efficiency because of the development in the European war and the important news brought back by army and navy men who have been home.

Nearly every one of these visitors is writing out his views.

While the war chiefs are forbidden by the President's order to publicly discuss the war in any phase, they did not hesitate privately to say today that Representative Gardner had exactly and squarely sized up the situation.

SAYS A FOE COULD LAND.

One of the admirals, a member of the general board, of which Admiral Dewey is chairman, ventured the opinion that Germany, notwithstanding our fairly good fleet, could land an army on the United States shores. He recalled the fact that for a number of years persistently the recommendations of Admiral Dewey have either been slaughtered in Congress or ignored to such an extent as to make the additions to the navy rather matters of expense than of increased efficiency.

In his startling speech Mr. Gardner was backed up with data from Major-General Wood, chief of staff; Admiral Dewey, is chairman, ventured the army, and Rear Admiral Twining, until recently chief of the ordnance of the Navy Department, and also by the detailed reports on which all the higher chiefs expressed their opinions to Congress.

FIRST DEMAND FOR POWDER.

The AMERICAN learned that there will be a demand on the new Congress early in December for an appropriation of $200,000 for powder, as a starter in increasing the army stores. Also there will be positive recommendations for submarines.

Rush work will soon be ordered to utilize the $260,000 appropriated some times ago for the increase of the torpedo plant at Newport.

PHILLIPS STATUE IN BARN AS OFFICIALS CLASH OVER A SITE

Boston's $20,000 statue of Wendell Phillips is destined to indefinite storage in an old stable on Audubon road instead of being placed on the Public Garden as originally planned.

Because of esthetic and temperamental differences existing between Charles Ulbson, of the Park and Recreation Department Board and the Art Commission, over a suitable site, the great Abolitionist's statue is treated like old junk today.

Unless Mayor Curley intervenes somebody yields, this sculptured product of Daniel Chester French is doomed to oblivion.

Commissioner Ulbson is on record as stating, with great emphasis, that he will never consent to have the Public Garden turned into a "graveyard" by having the Wendell Phillips statue placed there.

The Art Commission is equally positive that the Public Garden site, near Charles and Beacon streets, is the one and only place where it should be located.

WENDELL PHILLIPS STATUE.

In support of their contention, members of this commission assert that they had a verbal understanding with the old-time Park Commission that the statue was to be located on this spot, and they insist that this agreement be lived up to.

The City Planning Board also has been dragged into the quarrel, and will meet one week from today to draft a report, to be submitted to Mayor Curley later, covering the whole question from their point of view.

Following a joint conference between the Park and Recreation Department and the Art Commission representatives more than three months ago, these strenuous exponents of the temperament-artistic are sitting tight and doing nothing in the matter.

This adds to the complexities of the situation, because the right to select a site for the statue is vested in the Art Commission, while the power to determine whether or not it shall be placed on park property is a matter left wholly for the Park and Recreation Department to decide.

The City Council appropriated $20,000 for the memorial two years ago, and Daniel Chester French was given the contract with the understanding that it would be located on the proposed Public Garden site.

The Tragic Life Story of Mildred Sullivan, "Prettiest Girl" of Aroostook County

State and county officials in Maine are still hard at work, searching for Mildred Sullivan, dead or alive.

The disappearance of the "Belle of Aroostook County" has proved to be one of the most puzzling mysteries in the history of the Pine Tree State.

Parents and townspeople generally realize that for a school girl of seventeen to disappear so swiftly and effectually as an opportunist, or seasonal and uncanny.

That accounts for the intense interest in the case. The AMERICAN today prints the fifth instalment of a narrative embracing the life of the Houlton girl and a comprehensive summary of the tragedy based on a full and painstaking investigation by a staff reporter who was on the scene a fortnight.

CHAPTER FIVE.

Mildred put on her best Sunday attire. She was uncommonly particular about her toilet on that day. She wanted to look her best for a journey that was to be the most directful in her life.

Her thick brown hair never blended more effectively with the roses in her cheeks and her eyes sparkled with childish anticipation of the fun she was to have of the fair.

She kissed her little sister and brothers and gave her mother a long kiss and a hug. She placed in her purse the money for her train fare and with her uncle, Fred Melville, and her big brother, Ralph, hurried for the train. They had business in Isle and were company for her on the journey that lasted an hour and a half.

On the crowded platform at Presque Isle, crowded because of fair week, the first to greet Millie was Ambrose Bridge. Mildred's brother and uncle hurried to attend to their business and left Mildred with the former lodger, who some weeks before had changed his residence to Presque Isle.

Bridge's name had been linked with that of Katie Michaud, a slender brunette from the Provinces, after he had settled in Presque Isle, and visitors from Houlton had brought back the news to the latter town. Whether Mildred heard this does not appear. But the first thing Ambrose Bridge did after greeting Millie was to beckon to a pale-faced girl who stood near.

"Miss Michaud, Millie. My friend, Miss Sullivan, Katie," said Bridge, and the girls shook hands.

From that instant, according to the facts known to the police, Miss Michaud did her utmost to win the confidence of the little stranger from Houlton.

"You must come with me and be my guest," said Katie. "I have a lovely room at the home of the nicest old lady, Mrs. Southard. I know you will like there."

Millie Michaud, Millie. My friend. Miss Sullivan, Katie," said Bridge, and the girls shook hands.

"You must come with me and be my guest," said Katie. "I have a lovely room at the home of the nicest old lady, Mrs. Southard. I know you will like there."

Problems of the Prosecution.

Right at that moment Mildred Sullivan, away from paternal influence and warning, depending on her own judgment, blundered as her mother unwittingly did in letting her go at all.

Instead of refusing on the spot and going to her aunt's, Mildred consented to go to Mrs. Southard's with Miss Michaud.

And at that juncture in the case the prosecution is confronted by its first problem. It will be compelled to determine responsibility and motive from that step on.

Mildred isn't on hand to answer for herself. It will be the task of the state to help define her thoughts by the aid of corroborative and accumulative evidence, bearing on that and subsequent developments.

It appears to be the theory of the State that Bridge plotted to get the girl to Presque Isle.

The fact has been established that Ambrose Bridge engaged and paid for the room at Mrs. Southard's dwelling. Mrs. E. A. Southard is authority for this and Bridge has admitted it to the police, according to the claims of the latter.

It is of fact that Mildred may have first consented to go to the Southard house for a few hours, but that she was later persuaded to remain there during her stay at Presque Isle. Mrs. Southard, an estimable woman with two sons and an invalid husband, was apprised of what was going on, until after the revelations following the girl's disappearance. Like all others in the village she had let rooms during fair week to persons whose appearance did not warrant suspicion, she says.

Millie Sullivan's Good-by to Mother

Mildred kissed her little sister and brothers and gave her mother a long kiss and a hug. She placed in her purse the money for her train fare, and with her uncle, Fred Melville, and her big brother, Ralph, hurried for the train. They had business at Presque Isle and were company for her on the journey.

Mrs. Southard is small and white-haired and motherly. Her heart goes out to the mother of the missing girl. It was the biggest shock of her life to have the preliminaries to this tragedy take place in her house.

Mrs. Southard's dwelling is across the river from the village. It is a large, neat house, with well-kept grounds and typical of those that abound in the suburbs of New England. A girl of Millie Sullivan's age and inexperience would have been bound to gain confidence upon meeting a woman of the stamp of Mrs. Southard. Perhaps that is why she consented so readily to the first night instead of hurrying to Mrs. Melville, her aunt.

The girls, Millie and Katie Michaud, arrived at Mrs. Southard's on the afternoon of September 1. Later that day Ambrose Bridge and his chum, George Davis, came and hired the front parlor. The girls had been assigned to an upper room.

Dandruff Surely Destroys The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Heaven and Earth Being Shaken

The Ecclesiastical Heavens Shaking—The Social Earth Quaking—Thus Begin the Terrible Experiences of the "Day of Jehovah"—"Who Shall Be Able to Stand!"—Only the Unshakable Things Will Remain—These Will Be Incorporated in Messiah's Kingdom—Knowledge Gives Strength and Protection—Ignorance of God's Truth Disastrous—"My People Perish for Lack of Knowledge"—The Millennial Morning Dawns.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Pastor Russell, speaking to a great audience yesterday afternoon, the immense Boston Theatre being packed to capacity, thirty-five hundred and over two thousand turned away, took for his text, "Yet once more (finally) I shake not the earth only, but also heaven." (Hebrews 12:26.) In connection he read from Joel 2:11; also Isaiah 13:6, 9; 2:20; 3:16. He declared that all of these scriptures are applicable to the tremendous ending of the present Age and the inauguration of the New Reign of Messiah's Kingdom. The Pastor declared that these scriptures already beginning to have fulfilment. The heavens that are being shaken refer not to the Divine residence and Throne, but symbolically represent the ecclesiastical system of the present time. The earth, in a like sense, have been falling for some time. There is a great shaking or confusion now operating in ecclesiastical circles. It will progress until, as St. Peter forcibly declares, "The heavens shall take fire!"—shall be consumed, shall cease to be, leaving the way clear for the "new heavens," the ecclesiastical system of the Millennium, which will be the glorified Church, invisible to men, but clothed with Divine power for the blessing of mankind, for their release from ignorance and superstition, for their uplifting to a knowledge of God, to return them to the image and likeness of God, lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary.

The shaking of the earth referred to by the Apostle, and symbolized by those six earthquakes, signifies revolutions that are expected to immediately follow the present European war. And if the Pastor understands the Bible teachings correctly this great earthquake, which will eventuate in anarchy, will reach its culmination first in Italy. However, this will not be merely a sectional shaking—the whole earth, the entire social structure will be shaken, and something in it that is not of a permanent character—not in harmony with Divine plans, laws and arrangements—will be overthrown, in the symbolical language of St. Peter, the earth, society, also shall take fire, and will pass away with a great noise, a great commotion, a great overturning, as in the days of the flood.

Jesus' prophecy, referring to this time, points specifically to the "flood, the fire and the pillars of smoke" which "we may be beginning in Europe. More than a million men of the flower of Europe, in the bloom of life, have shed their blood, although the war is only beginning. The explosions of shells and the burning of cities and villages is surely a fire in the earth, the like of which never occurred before in the history of the world. The pillars of smoke are rising, not only from the battlefields, but also from the burning villages and the fiendish glow wherever the dead, too numerous to bury, are cremated. And so not the shed blood of martyrs, but also of many others, as well as other fulfilments of these signs, we surely see this much shaking and this much fulfilment already commenced. How much more of the blood and fire and pillars of smoke before the terrible ordeal is passed, we can only surmise.

The Pastor had courage to speak of these terrible things only because of his full confidence that behind this dark cloud, hidden from human sight, is the glad sunrise of the New Day—the Day of Messiah. With such a glorious hope beyond it—the hope of the Church's glorification in the First Resurrection power, and the hope of the world's Millennial blessing—God's true people everywhere can lift up their heads and rejoice though their hearts, even in the midst of Teacher, subtleties centuries ago, prophesied that they would do.—Luke 21:28.

"My People Perish for Lack of Knowledge."—Hosea 4:6.

Many of God's true people have been in ignorance of His real character and Plan because implied by the false doctrines of the Dark Ages. They have not studied their Bibles aright. On the contrary, many of them have been discharged by the cares of this life and the "deceitfulness of riches" and have been unfruitful in respect to their character-development and knowledge of God. The deceitfulness of riches does not signify that merely the rich are thus deceived. The great mass of humanity are under the lure of riches, spending their earthly attainments, time and strength of mind and body, searching for earthly wealth but getting little. Some of these in the distressing times impending, though late, may lose their sublunar and wish that they had been more alert in the laying up of heavenly treasures—knowledge of the Bible, of God, and character-development in His likeness. To such the familiar hymn will have a new meaning in its words—

"When all around my soul gives way,
He then is all my Hope and Stay."

Our Adventist friends are not the only ones who have made the mistake of thinking of the fire and shaking of the earth and heavens as symbolical of the cessation of "the times of the Gentiles" give this misinterpretation, but now, at least, it is time that our eyes of understanding should open. Now that the shaking and the fire have begun, it is high time that we should see that "the earth abideth forever." There is no reason why it should be destroyed; neither is there reason why humanity should be destroyed from off the earth. God's purposes have not yet been accomplished. Yes, the Divine Plan is only in its infancy. Humanity as yet has learned only its first lesson—"the exceeding sinfulness of sin" and the bitterness of its results. The second lesson will be given by Messiah during the thousand years of His glorious Reign of Righteousness. All shall be brought from the tomb, from ignorance, superstition, darkness, to fullest opportunity, knowledge and blessed uplifting. Only the willful enemies of God and of righteousness shall be destroyed. The race thus purged from sin and sinners, and again in the Divine image and likeness, will enter into its glorious inheritance—an eternity of God's favor on earth, even as the Heavenly hosts, sinless, enjoy the same favor, and life everlasting.

The Pastor suggested that there might be also literal earthquakes and great physical changes at this time, intended to bring the earth into alignment with Millennial Kingdom, but he is not so sure regarding these physical changes. They may or may not play a part in his trouble of this Great Day.

The Shaking of Mount Sinai Typical.

In the context the Apostle compares the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom, with its New Law Covenant mediated by the Redeemer, with the typical Law Covenant given to Natural Israel at Mount Sinai, as the basis of the typical mediator Moses. There, the voice, the cloud, the darkness, the lightning, the thunders, the earthquakes, were literal. Here, now beginning, we have symbolical things to be the inauguration of the Antitypical Covenant, which, at the hands of The Christ, is to bring the wonderful blessings foretold, to all mankind.

St. Paul declares that the Word of the Lord upon this subject implies the removing of all things that can be shaken, so that only the unshakable things can remain; and these unshakable things he associates with God's Kingdom of righteousness. When with the eyes of our understanding open we look about us, we see very many things that evidently are not permanent, not right, not satisfactory to God and to all with love righteousness and hate iniquity; and when we reflect that the shaking will be such as to overturn all these things, we realize that only the unshakable things can remain; and these, we are to expect, then, a great revolution, a great earthquake, which will overthrow everything that is not of the Lord's establishment and approval. From this standpoint a terrible time can truly be said to be approaching. But, as we are informed by the word, but counted of the Lord as "the wise" who are to "understand."—Daniel 12:10.

The Lord's consecrated people, possessed of His Spirit, caused in any sense rather at this calamities coming upon others. Their reliance has been upon the Almighty, and they have learned that they have to experience and know to be more than three-cornered signs. They rejoice not merely in their own behalf, but also on behalf of the whole world of mankind, for they have learned from the Lord's Word that during this Time of Trouble, which looms up as a dark cloud to cover the entire world, there will be a silver lining, a ray of light, already the glorious Sun of Righteousness will blaze forth, dispel every cloud and all the shadows of ignorance and superstition, and bring a blessing to all the families of the earth, as promised through the precious blood of Christ.

Great Changes Now Due.

Evidently wonderful changes will be effected, soon to be brought about gradually. We all know of the gradual change of the temperate zone—its extension further and further toward the poles. We notice also the increasing moderation nearer to the equator. Those who recognize the Power of God can have full confidence that He is able to perform all the glorious promises of His Word respecting the paradisaical conditions of this earth for the use of mankind during the Millennial Age and the ages to follow.

As already intimated, social upheavals are pictured in the Word of God under the symbolism of earthquakes, "mountains carried into the sea," etc. These upsettings in anarchy are pictured as total waves regarding the "mountains"—governments. This is one of the most forceful pictures used, in the Psalms, in Revelation and in our Lord's symbolical references to the great Time of Trouble near at hand.

We are not to understand as advocating anarchy or revolutionary acts and, on the contrary, we are giving tact to the Master's injunction that His followers should seek peace and pursue it; that they, like Himself, must not will with evil, those with whom they have to do, but must overcome evil with good. In this battle, nothing upon His or the world's side will be to their advantage in the short. We hold and teach that even the meanest evil, perpetrated or committed in anarchy or riot and in full sympathy and kindness we commend these to the Lord, assuring them that He will not unsympathetically "heaping cumulative cases" for under-recent conditions. Nothing is absolutely wrong with the Lord, and all are under His control.

We urge all who are the Lord's to seek to move and more understand His wonderful Plan and to rejoice gladly that it is unfolding in the spirit, which are His, and to wait for His time and manner of bringing to pass the blessings that all see are so much needed by the poor "groaning and travailing creation." We urge that they cultivate the graces of the Holy Spirit, should "put on Christ." His character of meekness, patience, long suffering tenderly kindness, love, sympathy, etc., and that they do all to these things, we shall never fail, but so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."—2 Peter 1:10, 11.

FULLER IS SILENT ON ASSAULT

Frank M. Fuller, the State street lawyer, who was mysteriously assaulted in his home in Roslindale, receiving injuries which, it was at first expected, would result in his death, was today declared to be recovering. Physicians at the Faulkner Hills Hospital said that Fuller would be able to appear in court Friday at the hearing for William F. Sullivan, who is held on the charge of attacking Fuller.

After almost three days of investigation at West Roxbury police are little nearer the solution of the strange attack than they were Saturday.

Sergeant Nixon visited Fuller again today at the Forest Hills Hospital and endeavored to obtain some statement which would give a clew to the identity of the person or persons guilty of the assault.

Fuller informed his previous assertion that he did not know who beat him. He said he did not know even whether it was one or a half dozen who were responsible for the operation of Sullivan, saying he was positive the latter had no connection with the assault.

Mrs. Mary Pugh of No. 629 East Eighth Parkway, Brooklyn, sister of Fuller, arrived from Boston to assist in clearing up the mystery.

The police, however, are of the belief that Fuller is withholding facts which would make everything plain, are investigating his record. Fuller's name was originally Pugh.

Mrs. Carman Goes on Trial for Her Life

"I'll Be Home in a Fortnight," She Tells Husband and Child.

confidence that the State would be able to build up an irrefutable case against the famous prisoner. On the other hand counsel for Mrs. Carman gave assurances to the prisoner's husband, Dr. Edwin Carman, that he had no cause to worry over the outcome.

It was a few minutes before 10 o'clock when Mrs. Carman entered the courtroom from an underground passage through which she had been led to avoid the crowds. The tall, statuesque prisoner, who had spent the night in the Nassau County Jail, glanced hurriedly around the crowded room, defiantly meeting the glances of friends and neighbors among the spectators. Then she sat down at the counsel table and entered into conference with her counsel, John J. Graham, ex-Judge Jerome Nassau and George M. Levy, of Freeport, together with her husband.

While Mrs. Carman was talking in low, earnest tones with her husband and her lawyers, William Bailey, husband of the murdered woman, entered and sat down beside District Attorney Smith. He made a sombre figure dressed all in black.

Meanwhile a crowd of fashionable women was rolling up in automobiles and pleading with the doorkeeper to admit them, but only about half a dozen were lucky enough to gain admission. The preliminaries incidental to the opening of court were rushed through in haste and the calling of talesmen was soon commenced. Mrs. Carman stood with apparent unconcern through as he was questioned by her counsel.

FIRST JUROR CHOSEN.

The first juror chosen was Robert Ludlam of Oyster Bay, who was sworn in as juror No. 1. He was the second talesman examined.

Despite her paleness, Mrs. Carman seemed to be complete master of herself. When she picked up a paper to glance at it her hand was steady. She was dressed in a new tailor-made gown, the dark material of which set off the pallor of her face.

The State used its first peremptory challenge when District Attorney Smith challenged Adam Langrote, after the defence had accepted him.

Alois Angler, a barber, was accepted as juror No. 2.

The third juror chosen was Frank D. Mount, a builder.

William J. Dwyer, a salesman, was chosen as juror No. 4, and Marx Gottsch, a gardener, as juror No. 5.

Alvin W. Smith, a painter, was chosen as juror No. 6, after which court took a recess for lunch.

During the trial the jurors will be locked up at the Garden City Hotel.

Before the proceedings were begun under way, District Attorney Smith, in replying to the interrogations of counsel for the defence, said:

"The prosecution has been conducted so far without any interference toward Mrs. Carman. All we want is to see justice done. No one will be glad to see a guilty woman freed on a free woman if she is not guilty. I am not fighting to sacrifice a woman's life. The evidence has pointed to one person as the slayer and that person is now going on trial."

As cool as though today was to be her day of vindication Mrs. Carman had received her husband and little daughter, Elizabeth, in her cell in the Nassau County Jail on the eve of her trial. She assurred them she would be home within a fortnight.

Dr. Carman, the accused woman's husband, said:

"Inside of two weeks I expect to take Mrs. Carman in my motor car back to Freeport. She is in the best of health and is ready for the trip. We are afraid of nothing that the District Attorney can produce.

"MY WIFE INNOCENT."

"Mrs. Carman did not kill Mrs. Bailey. I do not know who did. But my wife is innocent."

The Carman case combines all of the elements of a story worthy of the pen of a Gaboriau or a Leblanc. The central figure in the case, the woman whose life the State of New York—represented by District Attorney Smith of Nassau County—will demand, is not the usual type of woman who has figured in New York's famous murder cases.

Mrs. Carman is cultured. She belongs to one of the oldest and best families. She has wealth and social position, and numbers among her friends some of the best families of Long Island.

Mrs. Carman furnishes the heart interest in this tragedy that attracted country wide interest.

Then there is the element of mystery that is almost as deep today as it was on that fateful afternoon when the hand of the assassin was plunged through the shattered window in Dr. Carman's office. There was the click of a trigger, as he and Mrs. Bailey, up to that time a complete stranger to the Carmans, if the story of the doctor is to be believed, stopped over, dead.

Who fired that shot?"

QUESTION FOR JURY.

That is the question the jury will have to answer in the fateful afternoon hangs the fate of the beautiful woman who, since the tragedy, has stood in the shadow of the death chair, physically broken by the disgrace of her arrest and imprisonment, but mentally the same woman who, by the very force of her personality, dominated all those with whom she came in contact.

Scarcely is applying for admission to the courtroom where the trial is on. The court officials make no promise of reservations.

Mrs. Carman has been imprisoned since September 19, following the discovery of a thirty-eight calibre revolver, for which detectives had been searching since last July, hidden under the floor of the barn behind the Carman house.

DICTAGRAPH INSTALLED.

Mrs. Carman is forty-six years old —a woman of fine appearance. She is slight, clever and looks much younger than she is. She had been married to Dr. Carman for twenty years. They have a daughter, Elizabeth, twelve years old.

A short time before the tragedy she had bought and caused to be secretly installed in the Carman residence a dictagraph that connected her husband's office with her bedroom above. She think, she declared, because some of her neighbors had brought tales of her husband's friendship with Mrs. Bailey. She said that what she overheard reassured her and convinced her that meddling neighbors had misinformed her regarding Dr. Carman.

There was an investigation immediately after the death of Mrs. Bailey, after which Mrs. Carman was arrested on the charge of murdering her. She was released on $15,000 bail and remained at liberty until the revolver was found on September 10, when she was indicted on the charge of first degree murder, re-arrested and placed in jail.

REVIEW OF KNOWN FACTS IN BAFFLING DEATH MYSTERY

Let us briefly review the facts in the case and note some of the conflicting reports.

Mrs. Bailey, a trim-figured little woman, the wife of a prosperous butcher of Hicksville, entered the office of Dr. Carman on the evening of June 30 to consult him in regard to an ailment. Dr. Carman says he never remembered seeing Mrs. Bailey before that night, but that she had told him she had met him at a mutual friend's house previously.

After her talk with the physician, Mrs. Bailey arose and Dr. Carman started to place his hand on the office door. At that moment a revolver was thrust crashing through the glass of a window not more than eight feet away.

Dr. Carman jumped aside as a shot rang out. Mrs. Bailey cried: "I'm shot," reeled and fell into Dr. Carman's hands. She died in a moment.

SPRANG TO THE WINDOW.

Dr. Carman said he sprang to the window, but no one was in sight. Seamen who were on the auto-front waiting to see the physician rushed in the office and helped Dr. Carman lift the body to a couch. Then they went outside but found no trace of anyone.

Soon after the police arrived and made a thorough search of the house and grounds. There is no fence enclosing the property. It would be an easy matter for anyone to walk to the window from the street and fire a revolver.

The police found that the window screen had been raised by the assassin and a piece of shingle had been used to prop the screen open so that the pistol could be aimed under the shade.

Unable to form a definite theory the police sent for a pack of bloodhounds owned by the Long Island Railroad. By the time the dogs arrived the lawn had been trampled upon by hundreds of curious persons. The hounds were taken to the spot under the window and immediately started off on a scent. Followed by automobiles they travelled five miles along the road, through the village of Baldwin, through Rockville Centre to Lynbrook, where they lost the scent.

WIFE IN SPOT LIGHT.

Next day came the discovery of the dictagraph—eighteen hours after Mrs. Bailey was slain. This brought Mrs. Carman into the spotlight of the mysterious tragedy. Then the police learned that a white-clad woman had been seen near the office of Dr. Carman immediately after Mrs. Bailey was shot.

Mrs. W. C. Black, who lives opposite the Carman house said she heard the sound of breaking glass on the night of the tragedy and it was immediately followed by a sound like a gas explosion.

"Suddenly," said Mrs. Black, "we saw a woman all dressed in white run off the front porch of Dr. Carman's house and around into the entrance to the office. She went inside and we paid no more attention to her.

tigation that Mrs. Carman was not upstairs in her bedroom when Mrs. Bailey was killed, and that despite her statement that she lay down at 7 o'clock on the night of the tragedy she was seen about the house just before the shooting occurred.

Oscar Golder, a farmer of Baldwin, L. I., said he called Dr. Carman's house for treatment at 7:45, and that the door was opened by Mrs. Carman. In the reception room at the time was Archie Post and a young woman, Golder said.

"I sat in a chair that gave me a full observation of the porch. There, Carman and her mother, Mrs. Platt Conklin. A few minutes later I saw Mrs. Carman arrive from the street. She was dressed in white. She walked through a hallway leading through the middle of the house. I saw her pass the portieres. I don't know whether she went out of the house by the rear door or entered the kitchen.

But she returned a few minutes later, again passing the portieres. I don't know whether she passed to the porch or not.

"A few minutes later I heard the crash of glass and then a pistol shot. This was about 7:45 o'clock. I ran out Post and Carman followed around but saw no one. When Post and I got back Mrs. Carman entered the house with us. She looked at Mrs. Bailey and exclaimed: 'Oh, good God.' Then she went out. I didn't see her after that."

But Mrs. Carman next day declared she had never seen Mrs. Bailey dead or alive. To make the assertion more emphatic Mrs. Carman next day went to view the body of Mrs. Bailey.

She admitted she was jealous of Dr. Carman for a year and that freedom by her suspicions she had slapped the face of a nurse who had called at her husband's office because she had seen her kiss the doctor while she looked through the very window from which the revolver was fired. Of her actions on the night of the tragedy she testified:

"I went right upstairs after dinner, having a headache, and disrobed, lay down on top of the bed and was there until the confusion arose. I was never on the porch at any time that night."

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The fifteenth national automobile show, to be held in the Grand Central Palace in New York next January, will be a representative affair in every sense of the word. Already been allotted to eighty-five manufacturers of cars and to five makers of cycle cars. This is less than ninety-three manufacturers of dealers in motor accessories.

The allotment of space was made at a recent meeting of the executive committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The tire makers have again refrained from exhibiting, their contention being that there is nothing to be gained by making a display of tires at any of the big shows in the country.

The New York show will open January 2 and continue until the 9th. There will be no truck show in any of the big centres this year.

V. A. Nelsen, who for many years was identified with the motor industry in this city, is spending a few days among his old friends. Mr. Nelsen is now acting as a general representative of the Apple and the Splitdorf Electrical Companies, makers of starting, lighting and ignition apparatus. He is on a service campaign, which will carry him to all the branches of this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

His purpose is to thoroughly inspect the working of the apparatus and to instruct salesmen, mechanics and owners in the handling and construction of this device. His trip will carry him from New York to Newark, Philadelphia, Dallas, Kansas City, Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit, Toronto, Dayton, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Ore., and Seattle.

EASTERN ROADS PRESENT PLEA FOR RATE RAISE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Stating that "the needs of the carriers are pressing and immediate" and that "the actual situation has become extremely critical," President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad presented a plea from the eastern railroads for higher rates before the Interstate Commerce Commission today. He cited the situation caused by the European war as additional reason for an increase in rates.

Mr. Willard was chairman of a committee of railroad presidents having in charge the presentation of the railroad case. The other members being President Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania, and President H. W. Smith of the New York Central. His statement summarized the general facts upon the basis of which the railroads maintain that the commission should allow the general increase of 5 per cent. in freight rates.

Among other things Mr. Willard said:

"The annual statements of all the railroads involved in this proceeding prohibited, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, show roundly that the total operating expenses during that year were approximately $48,000,000 less than during the previous year, while the operating expenses during the same period were approximately $22,000,000 greater.

"The net operating income of these companies for the same period amounted to $250,000,000 or approximately $76,000,000 less than was earned during the previous year, and equal to but 3.59 per cent. upon the property investment, a lower return than was shown at any time in fifteen years.

"A war such as that now raging causes great and immediate disturbance to industry, commerce and finance. It causes contraction of credit and great restriction if not the actual stoppage of international trade as well as serious disturbance to domestic commerce, and, as we have seen, it has thrown the security markets of the world first into panic and then into suspension of operation.

"These have, in fact, been the immediate, direct and clearly apparent consequences of the war which began less than three months ago; but the ultimate and more lasting consequences are almost as plainly to be seen and will certainly follow if they do not accompany, the conditions mentioned.

"With all this in mind it will readily be seen that the available supply of and probable demand for new capital as well as the interest rates thereon are matters of great importance not only to the roads themselves to those who depend upon them for transportation."

Rob 6 Stations and Secure Only $17.83

LENOX, Oct. 19.—A pretty discouraged bunch of auto burglars is moping somewhere in this region. They made six breaks last night, and the six only netted them $17.83. The breaks were all New Haven Railroad stations. At Lenoxdale they got nothing. At Lee, they robbed the Fallman Company of $13.58. At South Lee they got $3 in pennies. At Stockbridge, they got 82 cents from the chewing gum machine. At Glendale they got nothing, and Housatonic netted them a nickel short of a dollar.

Nol Prosse Four Cases in U. S. Court

United States District Attorney French, who will give place to George W. Anderson next week, today nol prossed four indictments. In three of the four cases the defendants had pleaded guilty. The cases were: Jennie L. Minard, guilty of theft from a city postal station; Patrick Early, guilty of embezzling from the mails; John J. Melody, guilty of thefts from interstate commerce; John J. O'Connor, in whose trial for thefts in interstate commerce the jury disagreed.

For years Timothy Collins, seventy-five, and his wife Mary kept a lodging house on Leverett street in the West End. Lately Tim had been worrying over his health. Saturday night Mary lost their bankbook. He disappeared yesterday. Today one of the lodgers found Tim hanging by the neck—dead. One leg was across a rung in a stepladder which Tim had mounted to take the jump into eternity. The second foot hung towards the floor.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable oil.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to do their work—they never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" and feel "rotten" and have a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and safe pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O. ADVERTISEMENT.

SNIFF! GERMAN POLICE DOG IS MISSING NOW

Pinto is among the missing.

The police of the Court square station, from Captain Sullivan down, declare it was the sniff of German delicacies that did the trick.

Albert Caboozi of Morgan court doesn't advance any theory. He is simply heart-broken over his loss.

And there you have the nucleus of the latest canine mystery.

For Pinto was or is a dog, a great, shaggy fellow as good-natured and clever as he was big.

"He was a German police dog," explained the anxious Caboozi to the sergeant who took the facts. "He was trained in the work in the old country. I would sooner lose my right arm. I had him out Saturday. A friend accosted me. We had a drink. It was in front of a German delicatessen store in a basement. I remember we could smell the good old dishes coming through the grating. When I looked for Pinto he was gone."

"The vapor of good things stirred pleasant memories," broke in Captain Sullivan. "Pinto the sausage-hound. Have you tried that delicatessen shop or the city dog retreat?"

Alice Gentle to Sing Santuzza Role

With the production of "Cavalleria Rusticana" by the members of the Boston Theatre Opera Company tonight, when Mrs. Sylvia Palmer Bloomfield makes her debut, taking the part of Lola, Miss Alice Gentle, the Pacific Coast beauty, will sing the part of Santuzza.

Miss Gentle is a mezzo-soprano, and after appearing in amateur productions on the Pacific Coast the quality of her voice was pronounced by critics, who specialized on her, to receive Le Real education in New York.

NO STOMACH PAIN GAS, INDIGESTION IN FIVE MINUTES

"Pape's Diapepsin" is the only real stomach regulator known.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes —that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible stuff. remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing — almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who want to get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home, should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the most effective and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.—ADVERTISEMENT.

LANGFORD AND SMITH IN BATTLE AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

The dear old town of Boston still continues to occupy the fistic place in the sporting prints. The most important heavyweight battle which has been staged since "Gunboat" Smith and Georges Carpentier clashed in London will be held at the Atlas A. A. tomorrow evening. Sam Langford and Smith will be the principals, and a hard, fast battle is expected. The tussle is for the heavyweight championship of the United States and has aroused a tremendous amount of interest among fistic lovers.

A capacity house is expected to witness the whirl as the "fans" realize that Smith has the ability to make "Sir Bo" extend himself to the limit. The Gunner is not a glass-jawed, chicken-hearted fighter like many of Langford's opponents have been. He is a typical fighter and is able to punch hard as well as box at a merry clip.

There is no man not in this city last November and Smith was awarded the decision at the end of twelve rounds of rugged fighting. The latter's gameness and pep enabled him to outpoint the thick-necked, rushing "Bone Crusher" from Cambridge. Smith believes he will be able to repeat the feat again even though Sam will be in much better condition tomorrow night than he was when he lost to Jim Herman a couple of years ago.

Smith admits that the Langford whom he will meet tomorrow evening will be a better trained article than the boxer he was pitted against last November. He claims that he will make up this improvement in Sam's condition by fighting faster himself. He informs us that he has mastered quite a few things about the mauler art since he last showed in this city.

STRANGE as it may seem, Langford has been made a 10 to 8 favorite for tomorrow night's battle. Many of those who have followed the work of the "Tar Baby" closely contend that his mostly punches will cause the downfall of the white champion. They point to Sam's quick victories over "Kid" Cotton and Colla Bell and to his showing in his contest with Battling Jim Johnson. One must not forget, however, that Cotton and Bell proved to be pugilistic lemons and would be the easiest kind of pecking for Smith.

BELL proved that he knew but little about Langford's style of boxing when he attempted to exchange punches at close quarters with the negro. Any boxer who tries to do this is doomed to be beaten, as there is not a boxer/fighter in the world who is able to stand up and mix things with "Mr. Mix." Smith will probably be more of his fighting at a long range. He is taller than Sam, while he has a longer reach than Woodman's father. Besides this he is able to move around the ring faster. He has the "Tar Baby" by a mile by using a straight left jab. This caused most of Langford's punches to fall short of their mark.

A WIN for Smith will place him in the fo.. a title battle with Johnson. The heavyweight champion has wrecked his ring fortunes by a life of dissipation and idleness. He will probably be beaten by the first good fighter whom he meets. When a third-rater can last twenty rounds with Johnson, a rugged, two-handed fighter like Smith would have a chance to beat him.

LANGFORD, too still has hopes of winning the heavyweight championship. Johnson fears Sam. He has dodged a meeting with the "Tar Baby" since the latter gave him such a close tussle in Chelsea back in 1906. The writer believes that Johnson would prefer to meet Smith rather than Langford. He does not believe that the Gunner would be easy for him, but he would rather lose the heavyweight championship to a white man than to a negro. Is merely a case of professional jealousy. Johnson has more than his share of conceit and would like to go down in history as being the only negro to hold the world's championship.

JOE EAGAN and "Young" Jasper will meet in the semi-final bout. Six of eight rounds and they should put up an interesting affair. Lou will also be two six-round bouts between well-matched boys.

HERE is no interesting item which we all busily from Ed Curley a London chatter in the New York American:

"The bone that Johnny Evers pulled in the third world's series affair at Boston, was nothing on the one pulled by Leach Cross. Our good friend, Leach, who has been adding heritage to slawson to daily slaughter, asked Johnny to the conference, today, and one of his many last tonight was the waiter. Leach had a tentative engagement with Freddie Welch and it is said that this sends to oh for a wallop, on that an Wongest will take his place.

Leach claims that he was entitled to at least a draw, as he was trimming Gallant in a gallant fashion."

BATTLING LEVINSKY will meet Fireman Jim Flynn in a ten-round bout before the Broadway A. C. in New York tomorrow night. Levinsky is apparently enjoying the best of health as he is boxing six nights each week once again.

MATTY BALDWIN, Charlestown's great little fighter, has picked up something lately in Lynnfield and will be a busy young man for the next few days preparing himself for his twelve-round bout with Freddy Welsh, which will be staged at the Atlas A. C. on October 2. Baldwin has been knocking on the door of the world's lightweight championship for many years but this is the first time that he ever got a match with a title holder.

WELSH will undoubtedly enter the ring a favorite but one must not overlook the fact that Baldwin is one of the greatest short end bets in the history of the ring. Matty has been beaten when he started in bouts as the favorite but he has seldom failed to grab off the high honors when the wise men shook their heads and asserted that he would be defeated.

WELSH is a wonderful boxer and is blessed with a sensational left jab, but a veteran like Baldwin may usually be relied upon to give a good account of himself. Matty is a wizardly clever and when he comes to infighting he is Welsh's master.

Bedient, Angry Over Shift, Joins Feds

CARLISLE, Pa., Oct. 19.—Peter Calas, a Mission Indian from California, it was announced today, has been elected captain of the Carlisle Indian School football team, to succeed Elmer Busch, who resigned recently at the request of the coaching staff. Calas has played in the backfield for two years.

GOULLET SIGNS UP TO RIDE BIG SIX-DAY RACE

Alfred Goullet, Jimmy Moran, Worth Mitten, "Reggie" McNamara, Vincenzo Madona, Rudolphe Buglisuso, Joe Kopsky, Norman Anderson, Bobby Walthour, Oscar Egg, Percy Lawrence and Anderson are among the stars already in line for the six-day bicycle race at the Boston Arena, which opens Saturday, October 24, with a big card of sprint and motor-paced races.

Manager Butler and McLean landed a trump card in securing the signature of Goullet. He has ridden in six six-day races and has yet to finish worse off than one, two.

He won four of these and was second in the other two. He has never competed in a long grind on the Arena, and Boston's "fans," who well know his great speed and endurance powers, will certainly welcome him.

Another team which will bear watching is the combination made up of Jimmy Moran of Chelsea and "Reggie" McNamara, the Australian long-distance star. McNamara, paired with Eddie Root last year, finished among the prize winners and was one of the most feared men in the race.

Moran is in tip-top shape, as he showed when he cleaned up the best of them behind the motors late last Summer. Moran is doing mostly road work at present, but expects to take a daily spin on the Revere track shortly in order to get accustomed to the turns. Most of the riders are at present training at the Newark Velodrome.

Work on the track, which will be made of the choicest timber, will start immediately after the bouts a week from tomorrow night.

BOWLING FACTS AND COMMENT

The National Duck and Candlepin Congress is scheduled to meet at the American House at 2:30 this afternoon. It is said that Harvey Hintze of the Winter Hill alleys, Somerville, is making a strong bid for the annual tournament.

The City Hall, Corporation and I. O. O. F. Leagues gather for their weekly matches this evening.

Several of the club organizations which peg at the Boston pins will swing into line next week. While no schedule has been sent out as yet, it was recently announced that the Amateur Boston Pin League would open the week beginning October 26.

* * *

Carruth will stage the feature match in the City League this week. Boylston will be the attraction.

* * *

Although many are predicting a runaway race for Chamney in the City League, the first round, in which each team met the other, points differently. Boylston and Carruth promise to make things quite interesting.

* * *

SS. Peter and Paul Council of the M. C. O. F. League has gone through the matches and has yet to lose a single point.

* * *

This week's schedule in the Foresters' League will bring together the four leading teams. A cracker-jack fight should result, as only three points are between the leader and fourth position quintet.

* * *

G. Hersey of Maugus tops the individuals in the Newton bowlhepin series, with a pretty average of 202.

* * *

Mt. Benedict Council, which was just scored out for the championship in the R. of C. League last season, started off well, securing a clean slate in its opener.

The recent one-ball tournament at the Dewey Square alleys proved such a success that Manager "Mel" Turner is planning another event to be run on similar lines, but has not yet decided what it will be.

YALE ELEVEN TO RELY ON NEW STYLE OF PLAY

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 19.—Faatball, as taught by the present master of tactics, Frank Hinkey, resembles the historic gridiron game as exemplified on Eli gridirons fully as closely as a steam shovel represents a high-powered auto.

The day of mass play has gone at Yale and, replacing it, has come the ground-gaining deceptive double and triple pass, forward, lateral and backward. The sun has not set on touchdowns, either, as was concluded by many lovers of football last year, when the field goal seemed the only means open for the great elevens to score upon teams which closely matched them in strength.

The game has been given a wide-open heave by Hinkey, and the coaching staff believe that they have a scoring game.

YALE IS MASTER OF NEW GAME.

Whether the football of the future will call for a steam shovel or a high-powered car, whether it will demand force, instead of speed, only the final games of the season will indicate, but the Eli team is fully committed to the new game and the variety of play which Hinkey is introducing into it is wellnigh marvelous.

One of the novelties of Hinkey's coaching is the abolition of secret practice for the scrimmaging. Closed gates have been used simply for the drilling of a few new formations, but the field has been opened for every bit of scrimmaging and the scouts from rival fields have been free to watch the execution of the Hinkey plans as freely as they desire.

It is the belief of the coaches that no rival eleven can learn the Yale style of play before the close of the season well enough to play it cleanly and accurately. It has taken Hinkey and his lieutenants the entire spring of practice, weeks of evening work in the cage and five weeks since the preliminary practice began at Madison to hammer away perfection in the handling of the ball into the technique of the players.

Weeks of ground work in this drill cannot be taken now by any eleven because it needs nearly all its time to work the formations it must play in the final game.

Perfection in the execution of its style of play is relied upon by Yale to win its games, rather than novelties in the matter of formations or moves.

Another of the beliefs held by Hinkey and his staff is that there are no more easy marks, no more soft things on football schedules. It is no new experience for the Yale baseball nine to be beaten by the team of a minor college, and it will hardly be a novelty for the Eli team to take a thrashing now and then from some splendidly drilled minor college football team.

All the teams on the Yale schedule look formidable and, although no team had crossed the Yale goal up to today, Virginia should have scored twice, and many close followers of the Yale team expect Washington & Jefferson and Notre Dame to turn the trick.

Faith is firm, however, in Yale's ability to outscore all the teams before the annual contest between the new "Bowl" on November 21, and it is no certainty that Yale will be pitched in the Bowl in the christening game.

Record-breaking crowds have attended the games on the Yale schedule, and the increase is regarded by way of the attractive style of game the team has been taught. In general it is true that all the games on the Yale schedule have perfected their offence at the expense of their defence this season, and that, for this reason, scoring should be more frequent.

The Yale line-up is growing unsettled as the season advances. Mel Sceville, the former Dartmouth star, and Otis Guernsey, fullback last year, have been the sensations of the past week, and both are clambering for a regular backfield position. Injuries to Pumpelly and Alock Wilson will keep them a week longer from the game. For the present, Knowles, Le Gore, Sceville and Ainsworth will be the backfield set.

Braun, Carter and Schram are pressing Higginbotham and Church closely for end positions, and "Charley" Sheldon, George Mitchell, and Betts are almost evenly matched for the vacant tackle position. Captain Talbot having pre-empted the other.

Ineligible stars, including Farrar, Walden and Weldsman, have joined the eleven and are pushing Oakes and Jim Sheldon closely for guard.

Wolgast and Welsh to Meet November 2

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion, will box Champion Fred Welsh in Madison Square Garden, November 2, the first ring clash of real championship importance New York will have seen in a long time.

Coach Cross was stated as Welsh's opponent originally, but the dentist upset his own chance by losing a bout in Boston to Gilbert Gallant. When Wolgast was approached he jumped at the chance and will start for New York today to start active training.

Articles call for 125 pounds at 3 o'clock for the ten-round engagement. Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston, who brought the two together, has guaranteed each a fat lump sum with the privilege of a percentage of the receipts.

Morningstar Leads Billiard League

Morningstar is leading in the Champion Players' Billiard League. Sutton is second place.

Homer Cline played one of the most sensational games known in billiards at Troy, N. Y., at which time he defeated Koji Yamada, 300 to 26, running out the game in five innings with an average of 60. Special permission had been granted the players by the directors of the league to play 300 points instead of the customary 400-point game to enable the players to catch a train for Boston.

The standing:

	W.	L.	Grand Av.	P.C.
Morningstar	3	0	50	.857
Sutton	6	1	46	.857
Dewand	3	1	45	.750

TIGER STADIUM TO SEAT 40,000 FREE OF CHARGE

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 19.—The $300,000 stadium at Princeton University is about completed, and arrangements have been made to throw it open to the public for the first time next Saturday, when the Princeton eleven plays Dartmouth.

There will be no tickets issued for this game, and the general public can walk right in and sit down and enjoy the game. The seating capacity of the huge stadium is 40,343, making it one of the largest amphitheatres in the country.

The stadium was erected through the donation of $300,000 by Edgar Palmer of Rye, N. Y., a member of the class of '03.

$75,000 Fund for Big Race Meeting at Hawthorne Track

CHICAGO, Oct. 19. — Hawthorne race track, Cicero, as a running course in days when open betting was permitted, is to be the scene of a thirty-day race meeting next Spring.

Tom Carey, owner of the track, and "Blind John" Condon are interested in the effort to rehabilitate the banged-tail in the Middle West, and they are said to have raised a fund of $75,000 as a guarantee to horsemen that the meeting will go through, no matter what action is taken by the authorities as regards betting.

They intend trying out the races with the oral betting system practiced in the East. If this fails, mutuels will be introduced.

Noted Horsewomen for St. Louis Show

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 19.—An unusually large entry of Eastern horses has been received for the St. Louis horse show, which opens at the Coliseum to continue through the week.

The Eastern delegation will be headed by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who will show, among others, his international famed coach and four of grays.

Miss Belle Beach, one of the most noted women drivers of the East, will come with the Vanderbilt horses to show them in the events for lady riders and drivers.

Another noted Eastern horsewoman who has signified her intention of competing is Miss Louise Thompson of Rye, N. Y.

Bush Beats James in Touring Game

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 19.—Joe Bush beat Bill James in the first game between the touring All-Americans and All-Nationals here, the Americans winning 6 to 1.

Both pitchers were hit freely, though James fanned eleven and Bush nine. Hollitzel with three doubles and Murphy with a home run and a single led the Americans in batting while Rodriguez made two singles and a double for the Nationals.

OPEN GAME TO FEATURE BROWN-CORNELL CLASH

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Local sport lovers will have an opportunity next Saturday afternoon at the Polo Grounds of seeing the new style of college football played by two Eastern exponents.

Cornell and Brown, rivals of long standing, will engage in one of the most important attractions in this vicinity this season.

These elevens have polished up to the approaching battle so that they should be able to put into play the very best assortment of tricks possible from the new style of open formations.

This year such recognized leaders of the Autumn sport as Yale and Harvard have introduced a number of radical novelties borrowed from the Rugby game of the Canadians.

Experts from the Dominion have been in both camps teaching the multiple lateral pass, with which it is believed the Yale and Harvard will supplement and enhance the forward pass.

Coach Sharpe of Cornell has made a study of Yale's innovations and he may employ some of them in his efforts to beat Brown.

New England League Club Owners Meet in Annual Session

Some inshoots, outshoots, curves and hop jokers are looked for at the annual meeting of the New England League, at the Quincy House today.

More than one-half of the club owners having sung sort of a chip upon their shoulders, and several matters of interest are pretty sure to be threshed out.

Some of the club owners do not know, among other things, just how to regard the present purpose of the Lynn Club by Louis Pieper, the present owner of the Lawrence pennant winners.

T. H. Murnane is a candidate for re-election as president of the league, and while Jesse Burkett of the Worcester club announced some time ago that either Murnane was going to quit the New England League or he (Burkett) would, there is little chance of a change.

Evers Lines Up for Governor Glynn

ALBANY, Oct. 19.—"I'm making a great effort to get home to register but I may vote for you. If it is impossible for me to do so I have already obtained the pledge of a Republican friend to give you his vote for me."

This telegram was wired to Governor Glynn by John J. Evers, captain of the Boston Baseball Club, according to a statement given out at the Executive Chamber today.

Governor Glynn's reply was: "Thanks for your kind telegram. Accept my hearty congratulations on your great victory. Please shake the hand of every member of your club for me and extend to each my sincerest praise for his great work. Personal congratulations and best wishes to you."

No Winter Baseball for Larry Gilbert

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 19.—Hopes of local fans that they would see Larry Gilbert of the Boston Braves in action this Winter fell when Larry, immediately after his arrival, told them that Manager Stallings told him to spend the Winter getting over his injury and was not in favor of him playing Winter ball.

Gilbert announced that he has signed with the Braves for another year and would report in Macon, Ga., in March. He told friends that the Boston team was the greatest fighting machine in action. A big game at which he may appear as spectator, arranged in his honor may be played next Sunday or perhaps called off since he cannot play.

Gowdy's Team Wins Over Newark Stars

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Performing before an overflow crowd of 3,000 spectators, 5 members of the world's champions played on Hank Gowdy's All-Star team that defeated Al Schact's Newark Stars at Lenox Oval by a score of 4 to 2.

Josh Devore played the initial sack, Deal, third base; Connolly, left field; Gowdy, right field, and Dick Crutcher, pitcher. The latter was a complete puzzle, striking out fifteen batters and holding the International League group to six hits.

Gowdy was the idol of the fans. He struck out twice, but came through with a timely double to score a runner.

Rudolph the Star in New York Game

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Dick Rudolph, pitching hero of the recent World's Series with the Athletics, and his All-Star team played a 15 game at two runs each, with the Bronx Athletics at Bronx Oval.

Rudolph held the opposing batsmen to five hits, and also had five strikeouts. Woods, for the Bronx nine, was a worthy rival for Rudolph. He fanned nine batters, but, although hit safely eleven times, tightened in the pinches.

YALE SHOWS STRONGEST OF 'BIG THREE' TO DATE

By TED PARKE.

There were no upsets on the college gridirons Saturday and no black pages were inserted into the histories of the teams which, because of the fact that they each meet the other during the season, we choose to call the "Big Three," Harvard, Yale and Princeton are still undefeated for the season of 1914.

But the keen follower of college football usually desires to look a little deeper into the result than the bare score. The fact that each of these teams won their games does not necessarily show that they are improving at the same rate.

On the contrary, analysis of the games played by the Crimson, the Blue and the Tigers, tell very different stories.

Unquestionably, at this writing, Yale is the most advanced team in every department of the game. The decisive defeat of the Notre Dame eleven tells this story in a degree.

Princeton, on the other hand, was victor over Lafayette, because Lafayette made mistakes which were costly and made possible Tiger scores.

Plenty of Work for Coaches to Build Up Harvard Line.

Harvard defeated Tufts in the main because there was a Bradlee in the lineup. We do not wish to detract from the fighting qualities of the Crimson or the Tiger elevens, but in the former case, it is hard to figure out how Harvard could possibly have won without the hard hitting back who did most of the rushing, and the story of the Princeton game upholds our contention with respect to the Jerseyites.

First, with respect to Harvard's eleven. The line is not up to scratch by a good deal this year, and from this free in which we are viewing the campaign it does not look as though it would be for some time to come.

Of course it must be remembered that Haughton has had to contend with constant shifts in his line because of injuries to men upon whom he was counting, and this is a natural deterrent to the development of the unity and team play of the line.

Of the men who started the game for Harvard in the centre quintette Trumbull, Soucy and Weston were the only ones who showed aggressiveness and an ability to respond when called upon.

As long as Trumbull was in the game it was easy to understand how Bradlee was able to slip through the line on his slashes at tackle, for the acting Harvard captain was opening hole after hole for him. But neither Bigelow nor Curtis were promising.

Little Evidence of Team Play in Game Against Tufts.

The Crimson line is slow in charging, and it charges individually. Usually the best it can do is to pile up on the attack. In short, there is little evidence of team play.

Defensively, the tackles, except Trumbull, are easily drawn in and boxed away from a quick shifting play, and the whole line has a tendency to play a defence which is too open.

Withington and Curtis both play too high, with resultant loss of force, and both are slow in diagnosing their opponents' formations.

Harvard's strength still lies in the backfield. This will be balanced off, of course, when Pennock returns to the Tiger line, but no doubt was left, however, even in the face of the faults and failures of the team, as to the essential strength of the eleven in all the departments of the game with the exception of the offence.

But this is a serious weakness. This weakness showed itself mainly in allowing Lafayette linemen to slip through and nail the Tiger backs for losses, a fault which needs instant correction.

While weak on the offensive, the Tigers' line was conspicuous for its strength on defensive formations. In this respect, as individuals, the Princeton men played creditably, but they lacked the unity necessary to clear the way for the runners starting from formation.

The only times they showed team work was on running back kicks, when they gave valuable assistance.

Princeton still has to learn the use of the forward pass, and in the use of this play both the Crimson and the Orange and Black seem to be lamentably weak.

Neither eleven can look to this play with any degree of assurance that it can be tried in a tight place.

In the case of the Crimson, the use of the forward pass was conspicuous by its absence, leading one to conclude quite naturally that Harvard is still an infant in its execution and far behind many other elevens.

Princeton's strength at the present time lies in its backfield, which is more or less the case with Harvard. Glick and Trenkmann of the Tigers both contributed largely to the advance of their eleven by their speedy and cleverly executed end runs. This is rather a doubtful strength, however, in an important game.

Yale's segregation is showing in rather conclusive manner the wisdom of engaging Frank Hinkey as head coach. Today the Blue eleven is three weeks ahead of its development of a year ago, with little if any better material on which to draw.

Yale is showing a finish power and resourcefulness truly remarkable for this season of the year.

When a Man Gets the Blues Over a Girl, He Cares for Her. And When She Wants Him to Get Them, She Cares for Him

THE AMERICAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Her Husband's Widow

SYNOPSIS.

Leslie Morse, a beautiful young girl, is governess in an English middle-class family. She is romantic in temperament and has visions of a splendid future. Going for a walk by the sea, she is annoyed by a man she does not know. She is rescued from his attentions by another stranger. Leslie thinks her knight is the handsomest man she has ever seen, and wonders if she has found her Prince Charming at last. She meets him again and they fall in love with one another. He asks her to marry him and although she feels very badly when she finds he is only an army sergeant, she consents.

Soon after their marriage she receives a box of her mother's belongings. In it she finds a number of letters written by her father, and although they do not give his name they reveal that he was a man of title.

CHAPTER IV.

To that she demurred. "Oh, do you want to much? I'd rather stay at home with you. It's never dull with you. I don't care much for outside balls."

"Well, all right." He seemed a trifle surprised at her indifference to the form of entertainment he had suggested. They were finding out every day new little differences of taste and point of view. "All right," he repeated cheerfully, "let's get down to the serif." She took his arm, he sat at tea, and took her place opposite him. She paused as he proceeded to unbuckle his belt. "I wish you wouldn't do that," she said petulantly. "I hate to see you with your tunic unbuttoned. It looks so untidy."

He flushed deeply all over his fair face and muttered some words of excuse. It was the first time she had ventured on any correction of his personal habits. Presently you might like to in the midst of narrating some episode of barrack room life for his persistent use of the phrase "you bet."

"You know how these words annoy me," she cried, biting her underlip in vexation. "You used not to talk like that."

"Well, I've got into the way of it, really," he said, with a trace of asperity in his voice. "I don't pretend I'm a gentleman—at least not what you seem to mean by a gentleman."

But it was her mother's love story and not her own which possessed her thoughts next day. She found herself returning again and again to those letters and brooding half bitterly, half complacently over the mystery of her origin.

She was interrupted in the midst of these reflections by the arrival of Victor, accompanied evidently by two other men. She heard him in the next room. He followed her and explained that he had brought Sergeant O'Rourke, one of the witnesses at their marriage, and Dingly, the bandmaster-sergeant.

The non-commissioned officers received her a little shyly and with exaggerated ceremony. She gave her hand Dingly. Victor told them of her Neuchâtel, and they began to plague her with expressions of sympathy.

"You had better give me a fiver, Dingly," said Tierney, evidently anxious to efface the memory of his cheerfulness. He glanced at his wife and blushed, as he was very prone to do.

THE BANDMASTER FURTHER ANNOYS VICTOR'S WIFE

The bandmaster, feeling himself at the crazy place, rallied off a regular six. O'Rourke, without an invitation, helped to help, and trolled forth the chorus in a stentorian but not unmelodious voice. Leslie thought the song the most sickening and vulgar she had ever heard. In reality, it was regarded as jolly enough. She clutched her husband's arm.

"I really must go to bed," she whispered. "I'll horribly sick."

All three men at once manifested their concern. With difficulty she got away from them at last and locked herself on her bed. Victor knelt beside her, prodigal of regrets and sympathy.

"Oh, do go away," she entreated irritably. "I shall be better alone. I'll go out and enjoy yourself with them. You go. I want you to have a good time."

Very reluctantly he went, and she did not hear his voice or the three men led downstairs with much dragging of spurs, laughter and snatches of song.

"Why couldn't we have gone on as we were?" she asked herself. "He could have met me every other day. The romance would have lasted that way for years." And now she thought it was wearing thin. To adopt the plan he proposed would be to slaughter their love's young then. She must do something, she said to herself desperately.

She acted on the resolve and found a congenial if poorly-paid position in a bookshop, and Victor encouraged her in her work when he saw how much she enjoyed it.

Then came an unexpected order to his regiment to go to Egypt.

"Of course I want you to go with me," he said sharply. "Did you suppose I wanted to leave you behind?"

She got up from her chair, and drawing aside the blind stared blankly into the dimly lit street. Her lips were quivering, and she made a tremendous effort not to cry. Her reading left her in no doubt as to the kind of "lonely hole" at which they would be stationed.

She pictured the isolation—perhaps on the edge of the desert—the horrors of an Egyptian summer, for of course he would not be entitled to the long leave of an officer.

She felt that he was watching her. "Don't you want to go?" he asked wonderingly.

He waited. Then he drew a deep breath. "... see," he said. "You don't fancy the life ... Well, perhaps it's not very pleasant for a girl. It wo'n't fair of me to ask you."

She was tempted to give way to throw her arms about him, and tell him that wherever he went she would go. She wanted, at least, to say that, but the love which he had long given her strength was shattering, rebound. Another sober instinct reminded her that any weakness in such a decision as hers as she had acted upon it, it told her to be firm and not for the first time in a second time.

"I know I'm a pig," she said at length, in a low, mournful voice. "But I—I don't think I could stand it."

"You would rather stay here till I have got my commission?" he suggested with an attempt at cheerfulness.

LESLIE SORRY FOR HER UNWARRANTED TEMPER.

"If you think I'm worth sending for then."

She came back to the table, and meeting his pained, inquiring glance she burst into angry words.

"Oh, I know you think me horrid—a little cad—you. I never, you do! Don't touch me, and I shall scream! Don't touch me, I say! I know you despise me. Everybody does. You ought never to have married me. You know that. I hate poverty and poky lodgings, and ... and ... I'm not the sort of people we mix with, and all that. I can't help it. I was born like that."

She had angered him now. All his tenderness froze.

He returned to his chair and pretended to light a cigarette unconcernedly. "Thanks," he said with a dry little laugh, "for a short period we mix with." They are the same sort as myself. Now we know where we are."

"Oh, you can torture me like that if you are brutal enough," she cried, in fiercely. "I deserve it. Hadn't you don't know still."

He stood her coldly.

"What don't I know?" he asked sharply.

"Oh, what I am." Her voice rose almost to a shriek. "All things I have loved and thought noble I affect—I dare say they are—they're in my blood. My—my father," she went on with flushing face, "would never have—well, a man of title, if you don't know, I shall not be conscious that the phrase sounded flunkeyish—I suppose I've inherited his taste."

It seemed a long time before Victor spoke. "You sorry to hear this," he said at last. "It won't make things any easier. Because your father was a man of title you thought me capable to conceal his scorn.

"If you were the Napoleon Bonaparte or the Kaiser I might have understood. You look down on a Kentish, I suppose, because your magnificent father of yours had medals on his breast. I don't think, my girl, I reckon myself honored because I've married a scion of some old family. I'm not going to press a cruel sheet. We've got some money to live decently. I know places in Egypt—he used to borrow money from us. I think he was conferred a title. I'm sorry I've got to be married with him—not for Hobson's choice. He spoke with a little heavy fist. "I reckon I'm as good a man as your titled father, whoever he was. You are idly proud of being his daughter. Some day you may be prouder of being my wife. Good-day," he announced, "in three days' time."

"I shan't be able to do without you very long, dear," she replied.

SHE BEGINS TO MISS HIM WHEN HE IS GONE

It seemed to Leslie, looking it over afterward, that all the agony of the parting came to a climax on the Sunday, the day of the departure. She was left alone in her desolation. For many days Tierney's wife nursing she was directed to begin her duties at the Bond street branch. The chance of social intercourse with the evening she was wise enough to go to a theatre with Rose Darley, a fellow assistant. She hinted by her obvious dejection by the half-hour that she had parted with an old friend.

Miss Darley, suspecting a romance, was worldly enough to accept the saying that Miss Morne was living alone, insisted on her spending the night at her own house. The invitation resulted in a permanent partnership. They and Miss Darley's friend, John Forbes, and Leslie at once moved her few belongings from Chiswick to the tiny flat at Notting Hill Gate.

Presently she came to realize very sadly how small a part Victor had played in her life during the last three months.

She proved her evening at the play with Rose Darley, and the coffee and liqueurs afterward at some restaurant, where they sat among brilliant beshawled women and their opulent-looking shirt-fronted menfolk. She was living at least on the fringes of the world to which she believed herself of right to belong. Letters came from Victor by every mail. He was stationed on the frontier of Tripoli, perhaps a hundred miles west of Alexandria—out in the desert. He wrote cheerfully and humorously, but it was plain to her that his life must be inexpressibly dreary.

HE URGES HER TO COME TO HIM SOON

Six months passed and he began to talk as we sing, naturally and happily, and behold the face that was before expressionless is now lighted up with unconscious attraction. I think personally that a person's expression is the most desirable possession to be attained. Fixed regularity of features is monotonously uncharacteristic, but expression alters with every passing mood.

Work over your voice with unfailing effort whether you have a beautiful voice or not. Before you know it you will at least have the power to sing for your own amusement, and after you have arrived at this stage of the game take a peep at your neck and shoulders. You will find that they have developed with your voice. Because of your deep breathing and the steady taxation of your chest muscles, you have rounded out your throat and neck, and the added circulation of your blood has made your skin smooth and white.

"The round-shouldered girl unconsciously stands straighter if she sings and almost before she knows it the slight deformity has passed away. There are hundreds of other benefits in the way of better breathing that come with the exercise of singing, almost too many to mention.

"To sing is, of course, to be ambitious, and with ambition comes the ability to work and to enjoy work. What could be better to end my address to girls than to say that if we all had plenty of work, work cheerfully performed, and entirely absorbing, there would be no more unhappiness in the world. And the corollary to this is that every one is beautiful before every one is happy. Sing and be happy with your way of expressing, and watch for the benefits that are sure to come."

A Story of War and Love, Told by a World-Famed War Correspondent. The Author Is Now at the Front

"AFTER hell, more hell, and then still more hell!" was the way that Westerling expressed his thought when the evidences had taken the place of the fifty-third of the Browns in the redoubt. They put their backs to the concrete, deep enough not to be disturbed by shell fire. After the survivors in the van of the Grays' charge spent of breath, reached their goal and threw themselves down, the earth under them, as the mine exploded, split and heaved heavenward. But those in the rear, slapped to the face by the concussion, kept on, driven by the pressure of the mass at their backs, and, in turn, plunged forward on their stomachs in the seams and furrows of the mine's havoc. The mass thickened as the flood of bodies and legs banked up, in keeping with Westerling's plan to have enough to hold.

DESPERATE BATTLING

Now the automatics and the rifles from the redoubt to which the Browns had fallen back opened fire. So close together were these bullet-machines that the swish of each's swing made a spray of only a few yards' breadth over the redoubt, where the Browns' gun-fire had not for a moment ceased its persistent shelling, with increasingly large and rapid targets of flesh for their practice. The thing for these targets to do, they knew, was to entrench and begin to return the infantry and automatics' fire. Desperately, with the last effort of courage, they rose in the attempt—of course they could not stand up—to rose into playing hose streams of bullets whose cross-fire is a steady undertone between shell bursts. In the shrieking confusion of shells and fears! He summoned his chiefs of divisions, who came with the news that the Browns had taken the very redoubt from which the head of the Grays' column had started, but there they had stopped.

"Of course! Of course they stopped!" exclaimed Westerling. "They are not mad. A few are not going to throw themselves against superior numbers—our superior numbers beaten by our own pains! Lanstrom is not a fool. You'll see the Browns back in their old positions, working like beavers to make their defenses in the morning. Meanwhile, we'll get that mob of ours into shape and find out what's and where they dropped earth and flesh were mingled in the mucous action. Like one great rubber with the vertebræ breaking, gouged and torn and pitioned, the charge stopped. In terrifying, frightful confusion. Those on the outer circle of explosions were thrown against their fellows, who surged back in another direction from an explosion in the opposite quarter. Then, as the rear the pressure weakened, the human hammer rose to strike, driving the van. Blinded by the lightiness and dust, dizzy from concussions and noise, the survivors of the charge in natural instinct turned from their goal, toward the line where they had come, with death from all sides still buffeting them. Staggering, fighting first, for rear, for want of initiative in their motives; then rapidly, as the sense of preservation asserted itself in wild impulse.

RETREAT A ROUT

As sheep driven over a precipice they had advanced; even they fell. There was no longer any command, no longer any cohesion, except of legs struggling in and out over the uneven footing of dead and wounded, while they felt another pressure, that of the mass of the Browns in pursuit. Of all those of Fracasse's company whom we know, only the judge's son and Jacob Pilsen were left. Stained with blood and dust, his teeth showing in a grimace, his eyes wide open in blank wild, Pilsen's savagery ran its full course. Sticking right and left, he forced his way out of the region of hell. He still kept on, Clubbing his rifle, he struck down one officer who tried to detain him, and another who snatched from his hand a revolver bullet through his head.

Westerling, who had lurled his face in his hands in Manta's presence at the thought of failure, must keep the purpose of his command from the staff. With chin drawn in and shoulders squared in a semblance of military bearing, he received the fevered news that grew worse with each brief bulletin. He, the chief of staff, must be a rock in the flood of alarm.

When he heard that his battalion was in retreat he declared that the repulse had been exaggerated—repulses always were. With word that a heavy counter-attack was forming the retreat into an ungovernable rout, he broke into storm. He was not beaten; he could not be beaten.

"Let the guns cut a few swaths in the mob!" he cried. "That will stop them from running and bring them back to a sense of duty to their country."

The irritating titter of the bell in the closet off the library only increased his defiance of facts beyond control. He went to the long distance with a reply to his premier's inquiry ready to his lips.

"We got into the enemy's work, but had to fall back temporarily," he said.

"Temporarily! What do you mean?" demanded the premier.

"I mean that we have only begun to attack," declared Westerling. He liked that sentence. It sounded like the rebuke of a great leader in a crisis. "I shall assault again tomorrow night."

"Then your losses were not heavy?"

"No, not relatively. Tomorrow night we shall have the advantage we gained tonight."

"But you have been so confident each time. You still think that—"

"That mean to win! There is no stopping half-way!"

"Well, I'll still try to hold the situation here," replied the premier. "But keep me informed."

BELIEVED IN STARS

Drugged by his desperate stubbornness, Westerling was believing in his star again when he returned to the library. All the greater his success in beating down against scepticism

PRINCE WINS THIRD TRIAL OF CHANDLER SUIT

A third chapter was written today in one of the longest cases in the history of Massachusetts, when a jury in the Superior Court returned a verdict for Frederick H. Prince, clubman and banker, in the suit brought by Oscar Chandler against Prince.

The suit grew out of the remarkable stock market career of Mrs. Mary E. Colburn of Salem, who died about eleven years ago after losing a quarter of a million dollars in the markets. Chandler had been appointed conservator of her property and in time he brought suit against Prince to recover securities in stock transactions on margin.

Chandler's suit was brought on an old anti-stock gambling law passed in 1898.

The suit has been tried three times and $225,000 is now involved. In the first trial the Superior Court found for Prince. Chandler took exceptions and the Supreme Court sustained them and ordered a new trial.

In the second trial the jury returned a substantial verdict for Chandler, so Prince took exceptions. The Supreme Court sustained his exceptions and ordered another trial.

This time Prince has won, making it two trials he has won to one for Chandler.

War Tax Bill Goes Before the House

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The administration war tax bill, as passed by the Senate, was submitted to the House today. Majority Leader Underwood forwarded a hurried call for absentees in nearby districts to be present in an effort to insure a quorum to go through the formality of sending the bill to conference. This precaution was taken because of threats of Representative Henry of Texas to fight for some form of relief for the cotton planters.

Rearrested Outside Court for Assault

After having been arraigned in East Boston Court today for non-support, John Nesco, twenty-five, stepped outside, punched Costello Simonella, thirty-three, and was again arrested charged with assault and battery. The men are married to sisters, and live at No. 246 Bremen street, East Boston. A second assault charge brought against Nesco had been filed for a month.

Eat an Apple a Day to Help Boom New England

Eat at least an apple a day and improve your health and the prosperity of New England. This is the slogan of the Apple Consumers' League of New England, which has issued a "Housekeepers' Apple Book," giving 197 apple recipes. Here are two of them:

APPLES IN BLOOM.

Cook red apples in boiling water until soft. Have the water half surround the apples and turn often. Remove skins carefully that the red color may remain, and arrange on serving dish. To the water add one cup of sugar, grated rind of one lemon and juice of one orange; simmer until reduced to one cup. Cool and pour over the apples. Serve with cream sauce.

CREAM SAUCE.

Beat the white of one egg stiff; add the well beaten yolk of one egg and gradually add one cup of powdered sugar. Beat one-half cup of thick cream and one-fourth cup of milk until stiff, combine the mixture and add one-half teaspoon of vanilla.

BOSTON NEWS WRITERS FOOD FAIR GUESTS

Today is Newspaper Day at the Boston Domestic Science and Pure Food Exposition in Mechanics Building. Invitations have been extended to employes of the Boston daily papers to visit the Exposition.

Tonight, in Paul Revere Hall, Professor Lewis R. Allyn, who is responsible for the Westfield standard of pure foods, will speak on "A Wretched Trade."

Tomorrow will be Church Day and Grange Day. All the ministers of Boston have been invited.

Tonight, at 8 o'clock, Thomas Jordan, sanitary inspector of the Health Department, will speak on "The Housing Question."

The special events for the remainder of the week are as follows:

Wednesday—Civic Day, Mayors' Day, Coffee Day, Grocers' Day. Mayor Curley has invited all the mayors of Massachusetts to be his guests.

Thursday—Pilgrim Publicity Day, Housewives' Day.

Friday—Literature Day, Apple Day. Every person attending the Exposition will be given a ticket, which will be exchanged for a Massachusetts apple in the basement, under Exhibition Hall, near the $100,000 model for the Panama Canal.

Saturday—Federation Day, School Children's Day. 4:15 p. m., Paul Revere Hall, there will be a gathering of all the presidents of Women's clubs in the federation.

FARMERS FAIL TO APPEAR AT CITY MARKET

Fifty women who gathered today at the Free Public Market at Castle street and Shawmut avenue were disappointed when no farmers appeared with their produce. This was to have been "Apple Day" at the market.

"Where are all these farmers who are bewailing their inability to dispose of their apple crops?" asked one woman. "They heartily indorse the 'eat-an-apple-a-day' movement for their benefit and then when an opportunity is given them to sell their apples they apparently ignore it. Why, I ask, should the people worry about the farmers when the farmers refuse to co-operate with the free public market?"

"Unfavorable weather," was the excuse given by several farmers who had promised to be on hand.

Superintendent of Markets P. H. Graham immediately got in touch with several farmers who promised to appear at the market later in the day if the weather cleared. Superintendent Graham is very much interested in the market. He said:

"Bad weather has been a hindrance to the free public market since it opened on Thursday, but I haven't the slightest doubt that it will be successful as these started in New York and other cities."

Some of the women today brought little carts in which to carry home apples. Others carried bags and baskets. They waited around for some time.

Fear Lost Taunton Girl Is a Suicide

A general call has been sent out from Taunton to the police of surrounding cities and towns to be on the lookout for a pretty sixteen-year-old orphan, Frances Darcy, who mysteriously disappeared on Saturday, October 10. Orin Falkner of Boston, the girl's uncle, fears the girl has committed suicide as has met with some accident which prevents her from communicating with him.

Anti-Kamnia Tablets for All Pain

"The efficiency of any drug," says Dr. C. F. Gibbins, "is known to us by the results we obtain from its use. If we are able to control pain and disease by means of any preparation, we certainly are warranted in its use. One of the principal symptoms of all diseases is pain, and what is that important most often applies to us for, i. e., something to relieve the pain. If we can arrest this promptly, the patient is most likely to forget in us for the other remedies which will effect a permanent cure. One remedy which I have used largely in my practice is Anti-kamnia Tablets. Most any safe and reliable druggist can supply you with these tablets. They are unexcelled for headaches, neuralgia and all pains.

BOSTON AMERICAN
30 AND 32 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, OCT. 19, 1914.

See AMERICA---and Don't Forget Glacier National Park or Florida

This Is the Time, While Europe "Fights It Out," for Americans to Know What America Is

(Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company)

In every great disaster there is comfort of some kind. The war in Europe will educate Americans. It will make them rely upon themselves, help to rid them of that word "imported" which they have long worshipped as a fetich.

The war will compel Americans to KNOW AMERICA.

Millions will go to the great Panama Fair in California.

Far from the war injuring the Fair, it will greatly help it and increase the attendance.

Tens of thousands that would have gone to Europe will go to the Fair and spend there the money that they would have spent abroad.

Those travellers to the California Exposition will come back well informed Americans. They will have an idea of this country that they could not possibly have except by SEEING the country. They will cross and criss-cross the Continent in all directions, passing the great mountains, the wide prairies, the deserts that are being turned by irrigation and science into fertile fields.

Before undertaking your "Seeing America" journey, in whatever direction it may be, read, STUDY YOUR COUNTRY. And get some idea of what it contains.

For instance, study the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, the Yellowstone Park—which belong to you and other American citizens, by the way.

Study also, without fail, the Glacier National Park, and make up your mind to see that wonderful ancient home of the Blackfeet Indians, before you get too old to enjoy this earth and its wonders.

Glacier National Park is "Uncle Sam's newest playground." It is a great, marvellous region, in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, reserved for all of the people for all time. The energy of the American nation is put into the preservation of these parks, and the intellectual curiosity of the American people should take them to see all of them.

Think of the opportunity that you have in visiting the Panama Fair, WHICH YOU MUST SEE, and in the trip going and coming.

Plan that trip carefully, and begin now.

Not California alone, the Middle West or the great mountains of the North will be visible, but also that Southern wonderland, FLORIDA. While you are planning for your trip to the Panama Fair go down NOW to Florida and see that wonderful country.

Spend there a little of the money that you would have spent on that trip to Paris or London.

See the great land of fruit and flowers, wonderful color, warm weather, alligators, romance and delight.

Realize what energetic men the Americans are by seeing what they have done there, bringing civilization, comfort, every convenience, architectural beauty, railroad efficiency, to the warmth craved by the North.

If you own a garden you want to know it all, from the place where the cabbages grow to that other spot against the warm wall, where you grow the fruit.

You own and belong to a nation, and you should want to see ALL OF IT. The North where the snows are, the south of Florida, the beauty of Southern California, the marvellous national parks of the great West.

TRAVEL in your country, SEE your own country, take pride in it.

Learn to respect the words "Made in America." Ask yourself whether the money that has come from this country should not go back to this country?

Begin to see America NOW, and keep it up until you die.

Don't go to Heaven and be humiliated by having Christopher Columbus ask you what you think about the country he discovered, and being compelled to tell him THAT YOU HAVEN'T SEEN IT.

Help Our Home Farmers—Get Acquainted With the Apple

The Apple Consumers' League of New England is undertaking a very helpful work. It is pointing out to the people of New England the great value of the apple as a food and a medicine.

The apple is admitted to have great medicinal qualities. People who are careful of their health usually take an apple in some form for breakfast. Doctors recommend it as a part of the daily diet. Thousands of people have found that they need no other medicine than the apple.

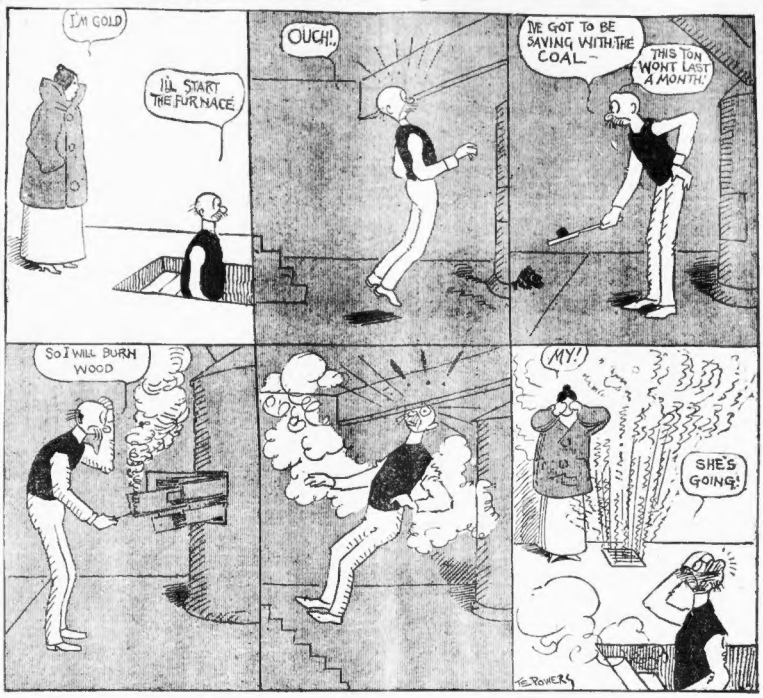
No one need be taught the toothsomeness of this fruit, but the variety of uses to which it can be put is not well known to most of our housewives. The Apple Consumers' League is trying to acquaint our women with all the culinary ways in which the apple may be profitably employed. They have caused to be published a booklet on the use of the apple, containing hundreds of ways of utilizing this most valuable of New England fruits.

During recent years those who have studied the opportunities of New England as a producing community have recognized the value of the apple as a staple New England crop, like wheat in the West and cotton in the South. Our soil and our climate are alike adapted to the best apple which grows.

The highly cultivated, big, handsome, western Hood River apple surpasses our Baldwin in looks, and, until the public is taught to realize the difference in apples—between quality and appearance—and until our producers learn the importance of packing their apples in attractive packages and grading them properly, the westerner will outsell our New England Baldwin.

But in real quality the western does not compare with our Baldwin, and when we have learned some of the selling tricks which the greater enterprise of the westerner some time ago began to employ, we shall have the market in apples well in hand and we can restore many an abandoned farm to its ancient fertility and build up again those New England communities which the wheatfields of the West robbed of their most enterprising young blood a generation ago.

Bungalow Starts Up the Furnace



Bungalow hasn't been in the cellar for a long time, so of course he bumps his noodle against the beam on his way down. You know how it is. Some of us wouldn't be boob enough to crack our coco again on the way up, but Bungalow does. From the last picture you will observe that the Nutshell's hot-air plant is in fine working order, sending up waves of dust and soot in great quantity.

TOM POWERS' HUMOROUS CARTOONS ARE A REGULAR FEATURE OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN

How Helen Helped

CHAPTER V.—THE PLOT IN THE OFFICE

NOT long after the row with Paul Van Buren Frank commenced to notice things were going wrong in the office. He had seen young Van Buren talking around among the other departments and had also noticed the men addressed by Paul glance over at him during the conversation and shake their heads as if in wonderment. Some of the fellows that formerly had been very chummy with Frank now tried to avoid him.

Frank knew Van Buren was up to something, but he could not find out what it was. Several large orders which Frank weeks before directed to be shipped had been held up. The "old man" knew of Frank's drinking, but as the youngster was always on the job and could do any two men's work he had never said anything to him about it. But now when he heard of the delayed orders, for which Frank was responsible, he called Frank into the office and asked for an explanation.

"Why, those things were shipped weeks ago. I remember them perfectly."

"Well, they were not shipped and if it occurs again you had better hunt a new job."

She hoped he wasn't going out for that

(To Be Continued).

As Frank left the office of old man Van Buren he went to the shipping clerk to find out why the things had not left as ordered. The clerk told him Paul Van Buren had been there and said the orders had been cancelled and the goods were not to be sent.

"So that's the way of it," said Frank. "That fellow would take money out of his father's pocket to get me in trouble, hey. Well, I wonder what he'll do next."

As Frank came back to his desk Helen was watching him closely. She knew there had been trouble ever since the row on the yacht, when Frank stepped in and saved her much embarrassment from young Van Buren. She felt it was partly her fault and wanted to say something to Frank about it, but she wasn't sure just how he would take it.

As Helen watched Frank at his desk she saw him get up, take his hat to go out and as he passed her desk he smiled pleasantly, saying he would be back soon.

Helen knew that Frank drank a great deal, and silently hoped it was not for that he was now going out.—H. C.

THE CAVEMAN

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE Caveman leapt on a night in June
From his cave to the light of the silvery moon.
He was fierce and hairy and tall and stout.
Like the cavemen the novelists tell about,
When they write how the heroine, Inez Pies,
Read the caveman love in her sultor's eyes.
But this is what I started to write:
The Caveman leapt from his cave one night.
He bounded along till at last he spied
The brother he wanted to be his bride.
The maiden was coy till a sandstone rock
Aimed at her head, her dome, her block,
Her ivory bean—call it what you will—
Brought her to earth, all meek and still.
And she trotted home with the Caveman grim,
For she worshipped the mastery shown by him.
Within one week she began to rave;
She said that she didn't like the cave.
The rooms were too dark, too small, too hot,
And the cave was not in a stylish spot;
While raving she bruised the Caveman grim
With the sandstone rock once used by him.
'Tis the same old story, it seems to me,
Of man and his wonderful mastery.

THE BELL BUOY

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

OH many a maid as her boat calms by
Clings close to her lover's side:
"As the bell buoy peals to the far blue sky
Does he chant for those who died?"
And every lad as he shortens sail
Smiles if he loves her well:
"The buoy is ridding our love All Hail!
To the tune of a wedding bell."
But still I chant and peal alone,
There on the waters grim;
I cannot laugh—I dare not moan—
Tho' the sea tear her from him.
Perhaps as for her my voice a prayer—
Perhaps as a wedding bell;
And he, who thought my message fair,
May find it Ocean's knell.
And still I clang and call o' nights
"Sailor, ahoal be nigh!"
For I must sound to nearing lights
Where hidden dangers lie.
Restless ever and ne'er at peace,
My voice must ever swell
With peal on peal that may not cease
For dirge or wedding bell.

Awful Examples of Matrimony

This Time It Is from a Woman's Point of View

By DOROTHY DIX

"THE reason why women are fighting shy of matrimony in these enlightened days," said the girl bachelor, "is because those of us who have had the gumption to stay single have taken too many peeks at our friends' households. What we saw has scared us off.

"Now, there's my sister Alice, who made what everybody called a good match, for she married a man well-to-do and well thought of in his community. Every now and then I go and pay Alice a visit, and what see makes me have a good cry the first night I spend in her house.

"Alice was the prettiest girl you ever saw, as dainty and delicate as a flower, and when she was at home we used to all wait on her because she seemed too fine and ethereal to have to do the sordid things of every-day life. You should see her now. She's thin and worn and old and broken before her time.

"She's always neat as a pin, but she doesn't have time to take care of herself and she hasn't any pretty clothes. She has burnt out her complexion over the kitchen stove, and bent her back over the sewing machine, and ruined her hands with the broom and the dishcloth, and dimmed her eyes walking with babies at night.

"All of the money in that household goes for good clothes for the husband and children. Anything is good enough for the wife and mother. The others go off on trips. She stays at home. They have amusements. She has none. Nobody ever thinks about her pleasure. Nobody considers her good. She is just the machine that runs the home.

"I don't suppose her husband has ever told her he loved her since the day they were married, and I am sure that if he were to pay her a compliment she would fall dead with surprise. For all of her hard work and her sacrifices she doesn't get any pay, not even appreciation.

"Is there anything in that kind of a home that makes a woman with a good job want to marry?

"And there's my friend Jenny. When I go to see her Jenny's husband treats me with so much deference and consideration that he makes Sir Walter Raleigh and his cloak look like a back number, but when he speaks to his wife he uses a tone of voice that would cause me to rise up and cast the coffee pot at his head, if I were his wife. Oh, yes, I've heard him say things that no man would dare say to any woman who had an able-bodied brother.

"Do you think any bachelor woman, who has got a right to give notice and quit if her employer doesn't treat her like a lady, is filled with any especial yearning for home, sweet home, by the sight of a home like that?

"And there's Sally. Sally is one of the most generous souls alive, but when we go out together she always is embarrassed to death if I propose going somewhere to lunch, and says that she never eats anything when she goes shopping except an ice cream soda. I recognize that for the lie it is, and know that the real reason is that Sally never has any money of her own and she's too proud to be willing not to pay her share.

"Once I was unlucky enough to be at Sally's house when the first of the month bills came in, and the poor girl presented them to her lord and master with trembling hands and a cringing mien. And well she might, for a domestic cyclone broke over her head. You would have thought that the whole expense of running the house was used for her sole behoof and benefit; that she had monopolized all of the steam heat and electric light, and had devoured every bit of the food.

"Is there anything in the picture of home life whose central figure is Mr. Tightwad that makes a girl want to marry?

"And there's Susie. After marriage Susie's husband developed into the champion hammer wielder. Susie works herself to death to try to please her husband, but she never succeeds.

"And there's Maud, who has married a man who is always reminding her of what a burden she is to him, and Clara, whose husband is chasing after chorus girls while she stays at home and minds the babies, and Estelle, whose husband drinks, and—but the list is endless.

"I tell you it is our married friends who act as scarecrows and frighten us out of the matrimonial fold. That's why we bachelor girls are fighting shy of marriage. We have seen our sisters and our cousins and our aunts, and we prefer to have dealings with men that we can leave without the formality of divorce proceedings if they don't treat us right."

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The entire expenditures for all departments of the Boston City Hospital during the fiscal year were $616,301.02?

Protective Coloration in the War

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

A STRIKING instance of the application of scientific knowledge to the purposes of war is the color of the German service uniform, a kind of invisible gray-yellow-green, which blends with the prevailing hue of a landscape, as it were, concealed in a chromatic haze.

Naturalists have long been familiar with "protective coloration," which is found among many species of insects and other animals, and it is rather surprising that this principle, which science declares to be a result of evolutionary adaptations, has not sooner been employed in the apparelling of armies. Khaki uniforms, which have been widely adopted since the Boer war, represent a first step toward the development of a scientific military investment.

But, according to the descriptions that have come from the seat of war in Belgium, the new German soldier's dress is an effective advance upon this.

Evidently a dress that tends to conceal the movements of troops is almost as important as smokeless powder, which keeps the secret of the location of guns, and its importance is accentuated by the increased distance at which armies now fight one another. Troops dressed in dark or flaming colors can be seen afar off, but the modern scientific uniform possesses something of the concealing power of the chromatic patterns with which leopards, tigers and zebras are covered.

Those who have never seen these animals amid their natural surroundings can form no clear idea of the blinding effects produced by protective coloration. Hunters in Africa have told almost incredible stories of herds of zebras standing in plain sight of the observer, and yet actually invisible to him, until a sudden alarm sent them away in a wild scamper. Their color and their markings are wonderfully accordant with the yellowish hues, and the barrings of black shadow that characterize the landscapes amid which they live.

It would seem a natural suggestion that this principle should have an important application to military aeroplanes and dirigibles. Contrary to what might at first sight be deemed probable, it is likely that white, or pale gray, rather than blue, would be the most effective color for an aerial craft which was to be rendered as inconspicuous as possible.

In the earlier days of warfare armies generally wore uniforms calculated to make them terrifying, rather than invisible, to their enemies, but the time of the "pugnacious red" has passed, and now nature's method, which tends to utilize the principle of optical deception and illusion for both attackers and defenders, is being followed. In our day the Assyrian wolf no longer comes down upon the fold, with "his cohorts all blazing in purple and gold," but he steals along like the tawny lion in the tawny desert, while his dusty-hued prey slips off, concealed against the background of sand.
